Fund Units Ready For First Drive

Big Decision To Rest With Local Public

Campaign Designed To Take Place Of Separate Efforts

Advance units of the Pickaway County Community Fund drive, first ever held in the district, began moving into action today. The campaign is set to hit full momentum during the first two weeks of October.

At stake is the question of whether one bit drive can be held each year instead of the many independent campaigns for the various fund-raising agencies. Led by Dr. G. D. Phillips, campaign chairman, the cause will lean heavily upon a prompt and full public response during the solicitation period.

Critics of the Fund setup, launched here during the Summer, maintain the local public will not contribute heavily enough to one consolidated drive to enable it to replace the numerous independent efforts. Widespread public support for the Fund organization is based upon the confidence that this claim will be proven by the first campaign.

Five agencies are represented by the Fund drive already in its preliminary stage. They are: Pickaway County Red Cross, Salvation Army, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and the Pickaway County Youth Canteen.

MOST OF the larger fund-raising organizations here continue to hold a watchful waiting position. All of them have been invited several times to join the Fund group.

Thus, it was generally agreed, a big decision will rest with the public during the next few weeks.

Solicitation has already been started in the Fund professional group, under the direction of Mrs. Emory Ridlon.

Letters asking for all-out support for the Fund have been sent to more than 100 organizations in Pickaway County. Fund leaders have emphasized that the effort is county-wide.

All groups are reminded that if additional information on the Fund is desired, a speaker can be obtained by contacting Mr. or Mrs. Robert E. Adkins, of 144 Montclair Ave. The Circleville phone number is 1176-R.

Under the direction of Howard Smith, solicitation will start Wednesday for the industry, business and employe group. This group has been divided into 19 sections, according to the type of business. Payroll deduction plans are being encouraged whenever they appear feasible.

SPECIAL efforts will be made to avoid any overlapping of solicitations.

Fund leaders hope to have much of the industry, business and employe solicitation work completed before the residential drive opens October 4.

Between that date and October 11, the residential and public employe solicitation for Circleville, under direction of Mrs. Louise Heine, is scheduled to be completed. Also slated for this period is the county residential solicitation, under direction of Clarence Radcliffe.

Mrs. Rosemary Mader and Mrs. Paul Rutzahn have completed their plans for solicitation of the Circleville school teachers, employes and organizations, respectively.

Each person contacted by a solicitor will be given a numbered pledge card. When filled out, the form card will state the amount being contributed and how it will be given. A stub will be retained by the contributor for his or her own records.

Contributors will be given a met-

Dem Nomination Now 'Attractive'

8 Governors, Several Senators In Contention Against Stevenson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Eight governors and several senators emerged today as potential contenders with Adlai E. Stevenson for a Democratic presidential nomination suddenly made attractive by the possibility that President Eisenhower may not run again.

There was a growing belief that Eisenhower, hit by a moderate heart attack in Denver Saturday, will not seek nor let himself be pressured into accepting a second term nomination.

That would leave the Republicans without a strongly entrenched candidate for the GOP nomination. Republican talk has been limited largely to the hope that Eisenhower would run again.

Some Republican strategists saw Vice President Nixon having the strongest support from among the

Ohio Criminal Activity Said Tapering Off

WASHINGTON (AP)—Criminal activity tapered off in Ohio in the first half of 1955, the FBI reports.

Murder and robbery showed a downward trend in the state, said the agency, as compared with the same period last year. So did burglary and larceny.

The crime slackoff coincided generally with a national trend. Looking over the American scene, the FBI said in its semi-annual Uniform Crime Reports:

"The year 1955 may show a long overdue break in the upward crime trend of the past seven years."

On the other hand, aggravated assault (cutting, stabbing, poisoning) and auto stealing were on the increase in Ohio this year.

Here are the crime rate figures for the state, showing offenses known per 100,000 inhabitants and comparing the first half of 1954 with the same months of 1955, (1954 figure listed first):

Murder and non-negligent manslaughter: 1.9-1.4; robbery: 30.4-25.0; aggravated assault: 17.8-19.1; burglary, breaking and entering: 168.6-148.4; larceny, theft: 511.5-486.5; auto theft: 62.7-63.3.

Gallipolis Grandma Completes Her Hike

MILLINOCKET, Maine (AP)—Grandma Emma Gatewood of Gallipolis, Ohio, has completed her 1,500-mile, 4½ months hike along the rugged Appalachian Trail.

The 67-year-old woman reported at the fire warden's station on Mt. Katahdin last night. She was two days ahead of her schedule for the Maine part of the trek, despite lameness of one knee. She began her long walk at Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., on May 3.

Mrs. Gatewood, believed to be the first woman to attempt the entire trek in one season, slept in the open or in lean-tos she made herself. She wore dungarees and a lumberman's jacket and carried a 25-pound pack, including food and blanket.

Weekend Traffic Takes 12 Lives

COLUMBUS (AP)—Autumn's first weekend brought a slight dip in the number of traffic fatalities on Ohio's roads compared with the totals recorded during the summer months.

Traffic accidents claimed the lives of 12 persons on state roads during the period 6 p. m. Friday to last midnight. Three more persons died in miscellaneous accidents.

Seabee Chief Dies

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rear Adm. John Richard Perry, 56, organizer of the Seabees in World War II and chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks since 1953, died at his home here last night.

state chairmen, governors and others who make up the core of the Republican organization, but they were not sure Nixon could win the nomination even with the blessing of Eisenhower.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, former California governor and a former presidential aspirant, made it clear yesterday he has not changed his mind about refusing to run again.

HIS NAME SPRANG back into possible speculation along with those of former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey, Sen. Dirksen of Illinois and two Californians who might cause Nixon trouble in his home state, Gov. Goodwin J. Knight and Sen. William F. Knowland, minority Senate leader.

Some Democrats saw the possibility of Eisenhower's withdrawal as strengthening Stevenson's candidacy, though it touched off backstage activity by potential Democratic favorite son candidates.

In losing to Eisenhower in 1952, Stevenson polled more than 27 million votes, a higher total than any other member of his party had ever assembled in a presidential election.

Some Democratic strategists reasoned that if Stevenson could register such strength against Eisenhower, he might be expected to win a contest against any other Republican.

Among the Democratic governors, the name of Averell Harriman of New York led all the rest. Harriman already has received some intensive support for the nomination from Carmine DeSapio, New York national committeeman and Tammany Hall leader.

Harriman has said he is for Stevenson. But that has not precluded speculation that if he believes Stevenson cannot make the grade he will try for the nomination himself.

GOV. FRANK J. Lausche of Ohio for years has figured in recurring speculation. At the recent Governor's Conference, several Southern state chieftains hinted they like the Buckeye chief executive.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan stands out as another possibility. He probably would face even stronger opposition from Southern members of the party than either Stevenson or Harriman because of his participation in efforts to force the so-called "party loyalty" rule on the 1952 Democratic convention.

Some Democratic leaders have been talking of Gov. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut as a possibility.

In the ranks of younger members of the party, Governors George M. Leader of Pennsylvania, Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and Frank Clement of Tennessee are mentioned. In the minds of most party leaders, however, they are tabbed at this point as vice presidential material.

Among senators, only Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, Stuart Symington of Missouri and Richard Russell of Georgia are regarded as top-flight possibilities.

Friends of Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota quietly are trying to form a Midwestern bloc that might make him a powerful factor in next year's convention.

Water Shortage Disaster Feared

Many chapters in history record how men have fought and died over the lack of water. And civilizations have died for lack of it.

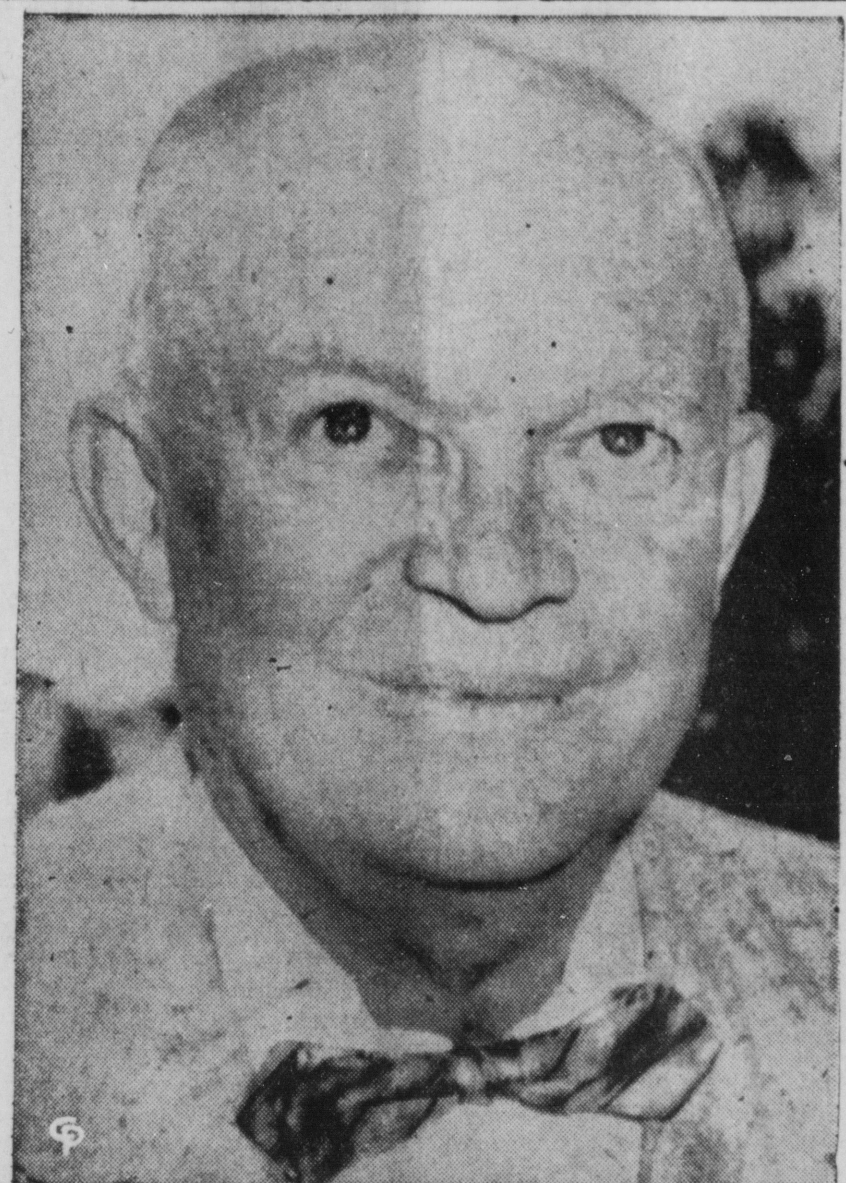

Today, experts are warning that the same disaster will strike in America unless U. S. communities awaken to the danger. A series of five articles concerning America's rapidly dwindling water resources begins on Page 4.

Dems, GOP Exchange Barbs In Continuing Farm Debate

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Democratic National Committee has issued a "fact sheet" which cites figures it said showed clearly the responsibility for falling farm prices "rests upon the Eisenhower administration."

At the same time, a group of Republican senators issued a 79-page campaign guide, prepared by the Senate GOP Policy Committee staff, which in effect accepted the Democratic challenge to debate the farm issue.

The Republican handbook contended the GOP already has fulfilled "most of the pledges" made in its 1952 platform. The farm section topped the list of 13 reports on "performance."

The Democratic "Fact Sheet," the National Committee said, shows the "unkept promises made by Mr. Eisenhower in his drive for farm votes in 1952 and recounts graphically the serious slump in farm income which has occurred under the Republicans."

It said that in no Democratic year since World War II did the parity ratio go below 100 per cent, and that since the Republicans took over it has consistently been below 100 per cent.

"SECRETARY of Agriculture Benson," the committee said, "has consistently told the farmer since 1953 that the problem of falling prices has been solved and they can expect farm prices to hold steady. But farm prices have fallen consistently and the parity ratio has fallen after each of the soothing statements by Benson."

The Democratic statement said the cost to the taxpayer of price supports under two years of Republican rule has been many times the cost during the entire 20 years of Democratic regimes. Yet, it said the level of nearly all price supports has dropped under the GOP, from 1 per cent on corn to as much as 24 per cent on sorghum grain, comparing 1955 with 1952.

The GOP study said huge farm surpluses piled up under past Democratic programs were responsible for the decline in farm prices and incomes and said this decline has been retarded by the Eisenhower administration.

It said nearly two-thirds of the farm price decline occurred under the Democrats and the rigid 90 per cent parity price support system, which the Republicans replaced with a flexible support program effective on this year's crops.

Parity is a price designed to give farmers a fair return for their products in relation to the prices they must pay for goods they need.

Baby-Kidnaper Pledged Protection

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—If the woman who kidnaped baby Robert Marcus a week ago today wants to return him to his crib in Mt. Zion Hospital, police say, there's no trap waiting for her.

That announcement was the latest development in a week of fruitless searching and frustrating dead-end leads.

A buxom blonde presumably took the son of Dr. and Mrs. Sanford Marcus, then only 3 days old, from the Mt. Zion nursery.

Mrs. Sanford, 29, was so grief stricken she refused food for several days. But she rallied Saturday after her other two children, 3 and 2 years old, were taken to her bedside.

Ike's Leadership Needed--Bricker

COLUMBUS (AP)—Sen. John W. Bricker (R-Ohio) says "the leadership of the President in this country and the world is greatly needed now and in the future."

Bricker commented on President Eisenhower's illness, saying:

"The whole nation is praying for President Eisenhower's complete and early recovery."

"I trust that at a very early date the President will be able to resume his duties . . ."

Sen. Bricker declined to discuss the political implications of the President's illness.

U. S. Policy Now: Business-As-Usual

Illness Of President Points Up Value Of National Security Council

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States government went to work on a business-as-usual policy today despite the loss of President Eisenhower's active leadership for an indefinite period.

The National Security Council now becomes the most important policy-making agency in the government. A strong advisory group, it now affords the mechanism through which Vice President Nixon may act in some degree as a substitute President, and others can share problems which otherwise would be the President's.

The statute which created the council eight years ago gave it six members—the President, the vice president, the secretaries of state and defense, the foreign aid director and the mobilization director. But in practice Eisenhower has broadened it to include other agencies and departments whose representatives are invited to discuss matters directly affecting their work.

The budget director and the secretary of the Treasury have become more or less regular participants in its meetings, and other leaders, both military and civilian, often attend.

NORMALLY the agency functions as a kind of advisory committee to the President. The final power of decision is his; the council is a convenient agency for helping him to make decisions.

To a lesser degree the Cabinet also provided a continuing body to carry on administration policy.

Assurances that the domestic and foreign policies and operations of the Eisenhower administration will go forward without a hitch came quickly yesterday from Nixon and three Cabinet secretaries—Dulles of State, Humphrey of Treasury and Benson of Agriculture.

Eisenhower retains the full powers of the presidency, but many of his responsibilities and much more of the work load that normally would be his can be delegated to others.

Even while recuperating from the heart attack which struck him Saturday, Eisenhower presumably could sign papers and make those decisions important enough to be brought to his attention.

In Denver, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the Justice Department has been asked to decide what powers may be delegated.

The Constitution provides that the vice president take over in case of the removal of the President, his death, resignation or "inability to discharge the powers and duties of office."

ONLY WHEN A President has died has a vice president ever taken over, however. No President has ever retired while in office, although the possibility was discussed after President Woodrow Wilson suffered a stroke Oct. 2, 1919. He finished out the 17 months of his term, lived three more years.

The three Cabinet members gave their assurances yesterday as they left Washington for Ottawa and economic and trade talks with Canadian officials.

Yom Kippur Due To End At Sunset

NEW YORK (AP)—Yom Kippur, the final and most sacred of the high holy days which ushered in the Jewish New Year, ends at sunset tonight.

Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, began last sundown for Jews around the world with 24 hours of prayer and abstinence from food and drink.

TOKYO (AP)—Juicki Oba, 43, had trouble supporting his wife and two children after he was dishonorably discharged from the Imperial Navy 11 years ago.

Then he joined a lonely hearts club last year.

He proposed to 10 women and bled them of enough money to support his family. He explained his frequent absences by saying he was working as first mate on an ocean liner.

When police arrested Oba today he quipped:

Fumes Kill 2 Chillicothe Youths

CHILLICOTHE (AP)—Shirley McCcloud, 17, of near Chillicothe, a high school senior, and her companion, Ernest Harrington, 18, also of near Chillicothe, died of carbon monoxide poisoning near here early today.

Dr. C. D. Leggett, Ross County coroner, said the deaths were accidental. The two were found in Harrington's automobile, parked in front of Miss McCcloud's home. All windows of the car were closed.

Mrs. Herbert McCcloud, mother of Shirley, heard the motor of the car running shortly before 3 a. m. and investigated. She called the sheriff's office and the couple was taken to Chillicothe Hospital where doctors pronounced them dead.

5 More U.S. Civilians Free In Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP)—Five American civilians arrived in Hong Kong today after long detention in Red China. Of the 41 whose release the Chinese Communists promised during the talks at Geneva, 14 have now reached freedom.

The five, who arrived from Shanghai aboard two British ships, were:

Dilmsus T. Kanady, 36, Houston, Tex.; Robert Howard Parker, 83, a native of Philadelphia; Emma Angelina Barry, 13-year-old daughter of an American father and a white Russian mother; Mrs. Marcella Munsterman Huizer, Wolcott, Ind.; and Eva Stella Dugay, 62, a Carmelite nun from Boston known as Sister Theresa.

Kanady, who was imprisoned by the Communists 4½ years on charges of tax evasion and black market operations, was in serious physical condition. He was taken immediately to a hospital. The Communists had operated on him for phlebitis, a circulatory ailment.

Kanady was the last of 10 imprisoned Americans the Communists promised at Geneva to free immediately. The other four were among a group of 12 Americans previously denied permission to leave Red China. The Communists said at Geneva no charges had been filed against the 12 and they were free to leave.

Heart Expert Sees Chance Of Second Term

Specialist Says Ike Has Reasonably Good Prospects To Recover

DENVER (AP)—Dr. Paul Dudley White said today that barring unforeseen complications, President Eisenhower's prospects for recovery from his heart attack "are reasonably good."

Dr. White was so satisfied with the progress of the President that he left immediately by plane for Boston, where he is recognized as one of the country's top heart specialists.

He said immediately after a final examination of the President that if Eisenhower's progress continues at its present rate he would be "physically able" to serve a second term.

The latest word on Eisenhower's condition came after his doctors had described his Saturday heart attack as "moderate" — neither mild nor serious.

That medical report was put out by the doctors yesterday.

From Fitzsimons Army Hospital, White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said:

"The President had a comfortable night."

"His condition remains stable."

OTHER DOCTORS are Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the White House physician, and by Col. Byron E. Pollock, chief of heart services at Fitzsimons.

Prayerful wishes for speedy recovery of the President, who will be 65 Oct. 14, poured into the temporary White House from all over the world.

At Fitzsimons Army Hospital, where Eisenhower was taken Saturday afternoon, there was no thought of the tremendous political impact of the heart seizure which stunned people around the globe.

That concern—and it is huge—was left to Republican party leaders who until the President was stricken had almost unanimously refused to entertain the idea that he might not be available for a second term.

The attack seemed to have raised a likelihood that Eisenhower would decide against seeking reelection. He said himself last Aug. 4 the state of his health would be an important factor.

Just a couple of weeks ago he told Republican chairmen from the 48 states to dismiss from their minds the idea of the indispensable man—and not to "pin your flag . . . tightly to one mast" because, he said, "humans are frail and they are mortal."

Doctors characterized the heart attack as "moderate" yesterday afternoon. It had been first described as a "mild coronary thrombosis," a clotting of blood in a branch of the arteries which supply blood to the heart muscles.

The designation "mild" was used only once—in the Saturday afternoon announcement that the President had been stricken. The

DROODLES

By ROGER PRICE

"PULL-OVER SWEATER FOR A CAMEL"

This is National Sweater Week, although I can't imagine why they have a Sweater week in September when it's still hot. A Bikini Bathing Suit week would be more like it. Or a National Everybody-Jump-in-a-Lake Week. I suspect the whole thing is a publicity scheme to sell more sweaters, which is a pretty sneaky way to pull the wool over our eyes. What we should have is a National Droodles Week because Drooding is a handy way to escape the heat. A gentleman just wrote me and said he wasn't able to take a vacation this summer so he started Drooding instead. And by just a few days some men in white coats came and took him away to a nice cool place.

Solicitation has already been started in the Fund professional group, under the direction of Mrs. Emory Riddell.

Letters asking for all-out support for the Fund have been sent to more than 100 organizations in Pickaway County. Fund leaders have emphasized that the effort is county-wide.

All groups are reminded that if additional information on the Fund is desired, a speaker can be obtained by contacting Mr. or Mrs. Robert E. Adkins, of 144 Montclair Ave. The Circleville phone number is 1176-R.

Under the direction of Howard Smith, solicitation will start Wednesday for the industry, business and employe group. This group has been divided into 19 sections, according to the type of business. Payroll deduction plans are being encouraged whenever they appear feasible.

SPECIAL efforts will be made to avoid any overlapping of solicitations.

Fund leaders hope to have much of the industry, business and employe solicitation work completed before the residential drive opens October 4.

Between that date and October 11, the residential and public employe solicitation for Circleville, under direction of Mrs. Louise Heine, is scheduled to be completed. Also slated for this period is the county residential solicitation, under direction of Clarence Radcliffe.

Mrs. Rosemary Mader and Mrs. Paul Routzahn have completed their plans for solicitation of the Circleville school teachers, and employes and organizations, respectively.

Each person contacted by a solicitor will be given a numbered pledge card. When filled out, the form card will state the amount being contributed and how it will be given. A stub will be retained by the contributor for his or her own records.

Contributors will be given a met-

Dem Nomination Now 'Attractive'

8 Governors, Several Senators In Contention Against Stevenson

WASHINGTON (AP)—Eight governors and several senators emerged today as potential contenders with Adlai E. Stevenson for a Democratic presidential nomination suddenly made attractive by the possibility that President Eisenhower may not run again.

There was a growing belief that Eisenhower, hit by a moderate heart attack in Denver Saturday, will not seek nor let himself be pressured into accepting a second term nomination.

That would leave the Republicans without a strongly entrenched candidate for the GOP nomination. Republican talk has been limited largely to the hope that Eisenhower would run again.

Some Republican strategists saw Vice President Nixon having the strongest support from among the state chairmen, governors and others who make up the core of the Republican organization, but they were not sure Nixon could win the nomination even with the blessing of Eisenhower.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, former California governor and a former presidential aspirant, made it clear yesterday he has not changed his mind about refusing to run again.

HIS NAME SPRANG back into possible speculation along with those of former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey, Sen. Dirksen of Illinois and two Californians who might cause Nixon trouble in his home state, Gov. Goodwin J. Knight and Sen. William F. Knowland, minority Senate leader.

Some Democrats saw the possibility of Eisenhower's withdrawal as strengthening Stevenson's candidacy, though it touched off backstage activity by potential Democratic favorite son candidates.

In losing to Eisenhower in 1952, Stevenson polled more than 27 million votes, a higher total than any other member of his party had ever assembled in a presidential election.

Some Democratic strategists reasoned that if Stevenson could register such strength against Eisenhower, he might be expected to win a contest against any other Republican.

Among the Democratic governors, the name of Averell Harriman of New York led all the rest. Harriman already has received some intensive support for the nomination from Carmine De Sapio, New York national committeeman and Tammany Hall leader.

Harriman has said he is for Stevenson. But that has not precluded speculation that if he believes Stevenson cannot make the grade he will try for the nomination himself.

GOV. FRANK J. LAUSCHE of Ohio for years has figured in recurring speculation. At the recent Governor's Conference, several Southern state chieftains hinted they like the Buckeye chief executive.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan stands out as another possibility. He probably would face even stronger opposition from Southern members of the party than either Stevenson or Harriman because of his participation in efforts to force the so-called "party loyalty" rule on the 1952 Democratic convention.

Some Democratic leaders have been talking of Gov. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut as a possibility.

In the ranks of younger members of the party, Governors George M. Leader of Pennsylvania, Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey, Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and Frank Clement of Tennessee are mentioned. In the minds of most party leaders, however, they are tabbed at this point as vice presidential material.

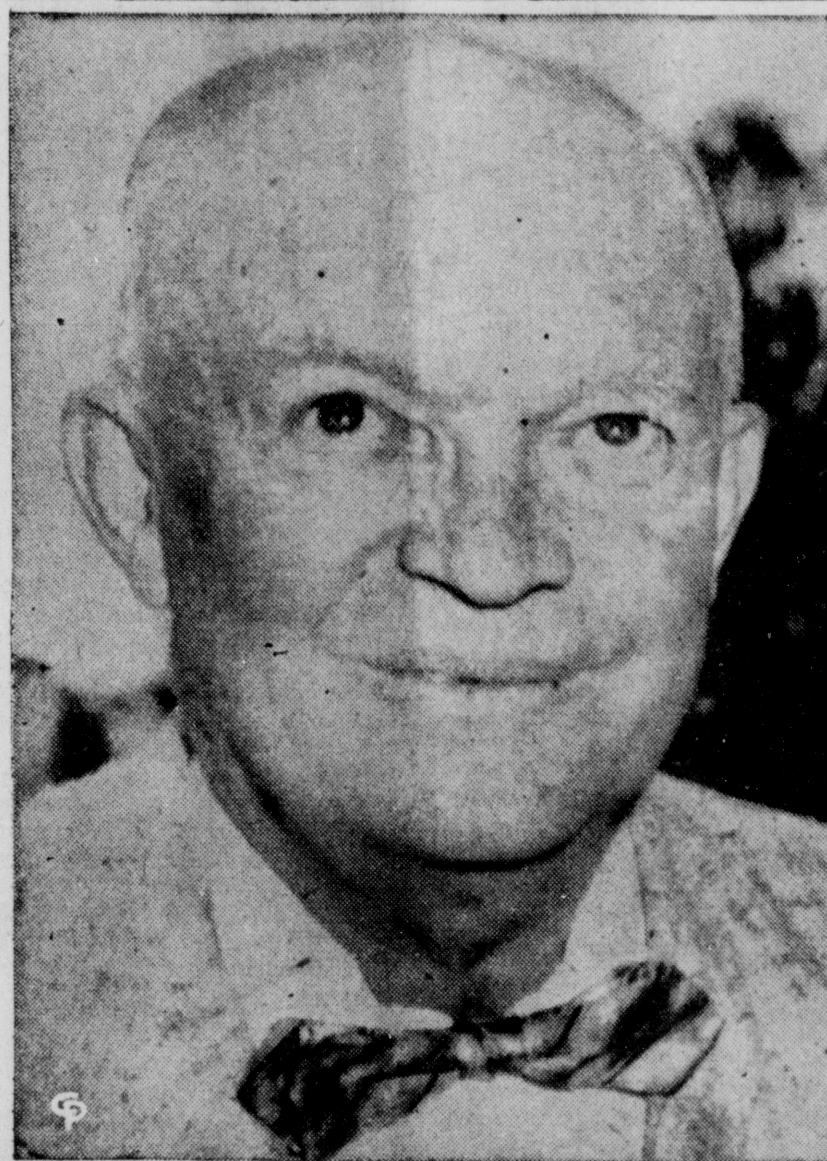

Among senators, only Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, Stuart Symington of Missouri and Richard Russell of Georgia are regarded as top-flight possibilities.

Friends of Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota quietly are trying to form a Midwestern bloc that might make him a powerful factor in next year's convention.

Water Shortage Disaster Feared

Many chapters in history record how men have fought and died over the lack of water. And civilizations have died for lack of it.

Today, experts are warning that the same disaster will strike in America unless U. S. communities awaken to the danger. A series of five articles concerning America's rapidly dwindling water resources begins on Page 4.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER is shown above in a picture snapped only a short time before he suffered a heart attack Saturday. He had just returned to the Summer White House at Lowry Air Force Base, Denver, after a short fishing trip in Colorado.

Dems, GOP Exchange Barbs In Continuing Farm Debate

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Democratic National Committee has issued a "fact sheet" which cites figures it said showed clearly the responsibility for falling farm prices "rests upon the Eisenhower administration."

At the same time, a group of Republican senators issued a 79-page campaign guide, prepared by the Senate GOP Policy Committee staff, which in effect accepted the Democratic challenge to debate the farm issue.

The Republican handbook contended the GOP already has fulfilled "most of the pledges" made in its 1952 platform. The farm section topped the list of 13 reports on "performance."

The Democratic "Fact Sheet," the National Committee said, shows the "unkept promises made by Mr. Eisenhower in his drive for farm votes in 1952 and re-counts graphically the serious slump in farm income which has occurred under the Republicans."

It said that in no Democratic year since World War II did the parity ratio go below 100 per cent, and that since the Republicans took over it has consistently been below 100 per cent.

"SECRETARY of Agriculture Benson," the committee said, "has consistently told the farmer since 1953 that the problem of falling prices has been solved and they can expect farm prices to hold steady. But farm prices have fallen consistently and the parity ratio

Kansan Offering New Farm Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—A program under which farmers would be paid for certain "approved" conservation practices, was advocated today by Rep. Avery (R-Kan.)

Such a program thus would provide farmers with better economic stability and also would preserve water and soil for future generations, he said.

He did not specify the "approved" practices.

Artist Is Suicide

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—A retired 92-year-old artist, Max Quezorek, committed suicide yesterday. His paintings hang in many world's galleries. Officers said his body was found in bed, a .38 caliber bullet wound in the mouth.

DALLAS (AP)—A cold front hung over northwest Texas today, touching off more rain following torrential rains of up to 11 inches yesterday.

U. S. Policy Now: Business-As-Usual

Illness Of President Points Up Value Of National Security Council

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States government went to work on a business-as-usual policy today despite the loss of President Eisenhower's active leadership for an indefinite period.

The National Security Council now becomes the most important policy-making agency in the government. A strong advisory group, it now affords the mechanism through which Vice President Nixon may act in some degree as a substitute President, and others can share problems which otherwise would be the President's.

The statute which created the council eight years ago gave it six members—the President, the vice president, the secretaries of state and defense, the foreign aid director and the mobilization director. But in practice Eisenhower has broadened it to include other agencies and departments whose representatives are invited to discuss matters directly affecting their work.

The budget director and the secretary of the Treasury have become more or less regular participants in its meetings, and other leaders, both military and civilian, often attend.

NORMALLY the agency functions as a kind of advisory committee to the President. The final power of decision is his; the council is a convenient agency for helping him to make decisions.

To a lesser degree the Cabinet also provided a continuing body to carry on administration policy.

Assurances that the domestic and foreign policies and operations of the Eisenhower administration will go forward without a hitch came quickly yesterday from Nixon and three Cabinet secretaries—Dulles of State, Humphrey of Treasury and Benson of Agriculture.

Eisenhower retains the full powers of the presidency, but many of his responsibilities and much more of the work load that normally would be his can be delegated to others.

Even while recuperating from the heart attack which struck him Saturday, Eisenhower presumably could sign papers and make those decisions important enough to be brought to his attention.

In Denver, White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the Justice Department has been asked to decide what powers may be delegated.

The Constitution provides that the vice president take over in case of the removal of the President, his death, resignation or "inability to discharge the powers and duties of office."

ONLY WHEN A President has died has a vice president ever taken over, however. No President has ever retired while in office, although the possibility was discussed after President Woodrow Wilson suffered a stroke Oct. 2, 1919.

He finished out the 17 months of his term, lived three more years. The three Cabinet members gave their assurances yesterday as they left Washington for Ottawa and economic and trade talks with Canadian officials.

Yom Kippur Due To End At Sunset

NEW YORK (AP)—Yom Kippur, the final and most sacred of the high holy days which ushered in the Jewish New Year, ends at sunset tonight.

Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, began last sundown for Jews around the world with 24 hours of prayer and abstinence from food and drink.

Nazi Chief Freed

BERLIN (AP)—Erich Raeder, grand admiral of Hitler's navy, was released from Spandau war crimes prison today. Serving a life sentence for war crimes, the 79-year-old former fleet commander was freed because of his age.

Dulles said Eisenhower has "forged a team" of his top officials who know their respective tasks.

This team, he added, can carry on with full effectiveness permitting "ample time" for the President to recover without jeopardizing the nation.

He said he himself planned to continue with preparations for the Geneva Big Four foreign ministers' conference opening Oct. 27.

Humphrey, also emphasizing the team aspect, declared "You can count on the functions of the government continuing in the absence of the President due to illness the same as they would continue in any other temporary absence. The same policies will be carried out in the same way."

Benson said there would be no change in agricultural programs.

5 More U.S. Civilians Free In Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP)—Five American civilians arrived in Hong Kong today after long detention in Red China. Of the 41 whose release the Chinese Communists promised during the talks at Geneva, 14 have now reached freedom.

The five, who arrived from Shanghai aboard two British ships, were:

Dilmus T. Kanady, 36, Houston, Tex.; Robert Howard Parker, 83, a native of Philadelphia; Emma Angelina Barry, 13-year-old daughter of an American father and a white Russian mother; Mrs. Marcella Munsterman Heller, Wolcott, Ind.; and Eva Stella Dugay, 62, a Carmelite nun from Boston known as Sister Theresa.

Kanady, who was imprisoned by the Communists 4½ years on charges of tax evasion and black market operations, was in serious physical condition. He was taken immediately to a hospital. The Communists had operated on him for plebeitis, a circulatory ailment.

Kanady was the last of 10 imprisoned Americans the Communists promised at Geneva to free immediately. The other four were among a group of 12 Americans previously denied permission to leave Red China. The Communists said at Geneva no charges had been filed against the 12 and they were free to leave.

Fumes Kill 2 Chillicothe Youths

CHILLICOTHE (AP)—Shirley McCloud, 17, of near Chillicothe, a high school senior, and her companion, Ernest Harrington, 18, also of near Chillicothe, died of carbon monoxide poisoning near here early today.

Dr. C. D. Leggett, Ross County coroner, said the deaths were accidental. The two were found in Harrington's automobile, parked in front of Miss McCloud's home. All windows of the car were closed.

Mrs. Herbert McCloud, mother of Shirley, heard the motor of the car running shortly before 3 a. m. and investigated. She called the sheriff's office and the couple was taken to Chillicothe Hospital where doctors pronounced them dead.

Lonely Gals Wooed To Support Family

TOKYO (AP)—Juieki Oba, 43, had trouble supporting his wife and two children after he was dishonorably discharged from the Imperial Navy 11 years ago. Then he joined a lonely hearts club last year.

He proposed to 10 women and bled them of enough money to support his family. He explained his frequent absences by saying he was working as first mate on an ocean liner.

When police arrested Oba today he quipped: "Any handsome man like me can do it."

Heart Expert Sees Chance Of Second Term

Specialist Says Ike Has Reasonably Good Prospects To Recover

DENVER (AP)—Dr. Paul Dudley White said today that barring unforeseen complications, President Eisenhower's prospects for recovery from his heart attack "are reasonably good."

Dr. White was so satisfied with the progress of the President that he left immediately by plane for Boston, where he is recognized as one of the country's top heart specialists.

He said immediately after a final examination of the President that if Eisenhower's progress continues at his present rate he would be "physically able" to serve a second term.

The latest word on Eisenhower's condition came after his doctors had described his Saturday heart attack as "moderate" — neither mild nor serious.

That medical report was put out by the doctors yesterday.

From Fitzsimons Army Hospital, White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said:

"The President had a comfortable night.

"His condition remains stable."

OTHER DOCTORS are Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, the White House physician, and Col. Byron E. Pollock, chief of heart services at Fitzsimons.

Prayerful wishes for speedy recovery of the President, who will be 65 Oct. 14, poured into the temporary White House from all over the world.

At Fitzsimons Army Hospital, where Eisenhower was taken Saturday afternoon, there was no thought of the tremendous political impact of the heart seizure which stunned people around the globe.

That concern—and it is huge—was left to Republican party leaders who until the President was stricken had almost unanimously refused to entertain the idea that he might not be available for a second term.

The attack seemed to have raised a likelihood that Eisenhower would decide against seeking reelection. He said himself last Aug. 4 the state of his health would be an important factor.

Just a couple of weeks ago he told Republican chairmen from the 48 states to dismiss from their minds the idea of the indispensable man—and not to "pin your flag . . . tightly to one mast" because, he said, "humans are frail and they are mortal."

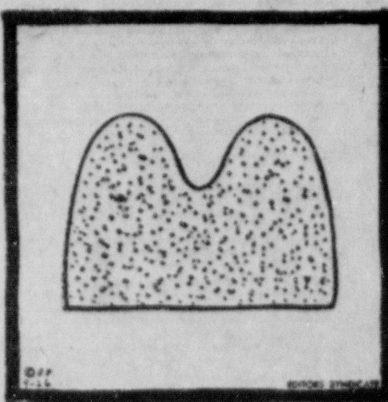

Doctors characterized the heart attack as "moderate" yesterday afternoon. It had been first described as a "mild coronary thrombosis," a clotting of blood in a branch of the arteries which supply blood to the heart muscles.

The designation "mild" was used only once—in the Saturday afternoon announcement that the President had been stricken. The

"PULL-OVER SWEATER FOR A CAMEL"

This is National Sweater Week, although I can't imagine why they have a Sweater week in September when it's still hot. A Bikini Bathing Suit week would be more like it. Or a National Everybody-Jump-in-a-Lake Week. I suspect the whole thing is a publicity scheme to sell more sweaters, which is a pretty sneaky way to pull the wool over our eyes. What we should have is a National Droodles Week because Drooding is a dandy way to escape the heat. A gentleman just wrote me and said he wasn't able to take a vacation this summer so he started Drooding instead. And in just a few days some men in white coats came and took him away to a nice cool place.

On this point, a spokesman for the fund said:

"Under the various Community Fund setups all over the country, a frequent question is: 'What is a fair gift from any one person?'"

"There are many reasonable answers, but the most often heard are to give either one day's pay, or anywhere from one-half percent to two percent of gross earnings, or the sum total of what you have been giving to the fund-raising organizations separately.

"At any rate, we want to underline the one big point. The contributor is the only one who can decide a fair amount for his or her donation."

Accident Is Rough On Parking Meter

A parking meter on S. Court St. near Franklin took a sudden beating Saturday night when an automobile driven by a Lancaster man bumped a parked car, knocking it against the meter.

Police said a machine driven by Glenn E. Ours, of Lancaster, swerved into the parked car while moving about 10 miles an hour. A parking meter alongside the standing car was ripped from its base in the accident.

Sgt. Turney Ross and Officer Russ Ogan reported Ours told them the steering apparatus on his machine locked and caused the mishap.

The accident occurred about 10:36 p. m. Saturday. Both cars were damaged, but no injuries were reported.

Woman Uninjured, Fell Against Train

City police said an elderly woman apparently escaped injury Saturday night when she happened to brush against the side of a slowly moving freight train.

According to a report to Police Chief Elmer Merriman, Martha E. Phelps, 82, of 733 S. Scioto St., said she stumbled against the cars when she turned on her ankle. Police said she declined medical attention.

The train, on a spur track between Scioto and Maplewood streets, was moving less than five miles an hour at the time, police reported.

Heart Expert Sees Chance Of Second Term

switch to "moderate" came after he had been examined by White and another leading heart specialist who flew here from the East.

In addition to White, one of the world's foremost experts, the afternoon bulletin was signed by:

General Snyder, who first diagnosed the attack; Col. Thomas W. Mattingly, who rushed here from the Army's Walter Reed Hospital in Washington; and Col. Byron E. Pollack, chief of heart service at Fitzsimons Hospital.

Eisenhower's illness, first announced as a "digestive upset" by Gen. Snyder, brought his son, an Army major, from Washington yesterday. The chief executive's wife moved Saturday night from the Denver home of her mother, Mrs. John S. Doud to Fitzsimons Hospital, where she took a room across the hall from the President's. She has stayed on there since. John remained at the hospital last night too.

The First Lady visited with her husband twice yesterday. John had one brief chat with his father, who has been in an oxygen tent since he was hospitalized. Physicians said the tent is standard procedure in coronary cases because it enables patients to get complete rest.

Each medical bulletin on Eisenhower's condition was being telephoned to Vice President Nixon in Washington before being made public. And a White House aide gave reports by telephone to each of the President's four brothers.

Nixon had been scheduled to come to Denver today to preside at a conference Eisenhower had called for Tuesday and Wednesday on how to build the physical fitness of America's youth. Eisenhower's illness brought cancellation of the conference and Nixon decided to remain in Washington.

Until yesterday noon the President's only nourishment had been fruit juices. Then he asked for and got a bowl of oatmeal and ate it all.

Hagerty, who cut his vacation short and flew to Denver when Eisenhower was stricken, reported that the President has slept a good deal in the hospital.

In response to questions, Hagerty said there was no indication as yet how long Eisenhower would have to remain in the hospital. He also said no consideration was being given to moving the President back to Washington.

Five Persons Suffer Injuries In District Weekend Accidents

At least five persons were injured in traffic accidents in Pickaway County over the weekend.

One woman was seriously hurt in a crash at the intersection of Routes 104 and 56, three miles northwest of Circleville. A blinker light has frequently been urged for the crossing, one of the district's most dangerous.

The accident at that intersection happened about 11:10 p. m. Saturday when a car driven by G. Ross Courtright, 60, of 1242 S. Pickaway St., was struck by a truck driven by Charles W. Rewoldt, 37, of Hamilton, Mich. Deputy Sheriff Dwight Radcliff, who investigated the crash, said Courtright was turning left at the time from Route 104 into Route 56.

The truck, the deputy said, was attempting to pass the smaller vehicle in a heavy fog at the time of the accident.

Carrie Courtright, a passenger in the car, suffered a possible broken back and was taken to Berger Hospital.

DEPUTY Radcliff said Rewoldt has been ordered to appear in city court to face an accusation of driving left of yellow line.

U.S. To Offer Arms To Egypt

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States is trying to counter with its own offer a Russian bid to sell arms to Egypt. Such a sale of American weapons would surely bring a protest from Israel.

The American offer was made on the theory that United States security would be weakened if Russia became an arms supplier to Middle Eastern countries.

Egypt was described as very much interested in the American offer but was reportedly seeking American financial aid to buy the military equipment.

Israel regards any attempt to bolster the armed forces of the Arab countries as a threat to its own security.

Big Decision To Rest With Local Public

al Red Feather tab, and a small sticker reading: "We Give—The United Way". The sticker is to be prominently displayed. All solicitors have been instructed not to stop where this sticker is shown.

ANYONE NOT contacted by a solicitor may contribute by sending a check, payable to the Pickaway County Community Fund, Inc. The check should be mailed to Earl W. Palm, treasurer, Pickaway County Community Fund, care of the Second National Bank, Circleville, O.

Fund officials stressed that all donations, regardless of amount, will be appreciated.

On this point, a spokesman for the fund said:

"Under the various Community Fund setups all over the country, a frequent question is: 'What is a fair gift from any one person?'"

"There are many reasonable answers, but the most often heard are to give either one day's pay, or anywhere from one-half percent to two percent of gross earnings, or the sum total of what you have been giving to the fund-raising organizations separately."

"At any rate, we want to underline the one big point. The contributor is the only one who can decide a fair amount for his or her donation."

Accident Is Rough On Parking Meter

A parking meter on S. Court St. near Franklin took a sudden beating Saturday night when an automobile driven by a Lancaster man bumped a parked car, knocking it against the meter.

Police said a machine driven by Glenn E. Ours, of Lancaster, swerved into the parked car while moving about 10 miles an hour. A parking meter alongside the standing car was ripped from its base in the accident.

Sgt. Turney Ross and Officer Russ Ogan reported Ours told them the steering apparatus on his machine locked and caused the mishap.

The accident occurred about 10:36 p. m. Saturday. Both cars were damaged, but no injuries were reported.

Woman Uninjured, Fell Against Train

City police said an elderly woman apparently escaped injury Saturday night when she happened to brush against the side of a slowly moving freight train.

According to a report to Police Chief Elmer Merriman, Martha E. Phelps, 82, of 733 S. Scioto St., said she stumbled against the cars when she turned on her ankle. Police said she declined medical attention.

The train, on a spur track between Scioto and Maplewood streets, was moving less than five miles an hour at the time, police reported.

Heart Expert Sees Chance Of Second Term

switch to "moderate" came after he had been examined by White and another leading heart specialist who flew here from the East.

In addition to White, one of the world's foremost experts, the afternoon bulletin was signed by:

General Snyder, who first diagnosed the attack; Col. Thomas W. Mattingly, who rushed here from the Army's Walter Reed Hospital in Washington; and Col. Byron E. Pollack, chief of heart service at Fitzsimons Hospital.

Eisenhower's illness, first announced as a "digestive upset" by Gen. Snyder, brought his son, an Army major, from Washington yesterday. The chief executive's wife moved Saturday night from the Denver home of her mother, Mrs. John S. Doud to Fitzsimons Hospital, where she took a room across the hall from the President's. She has stayed on there since. John remained at the hospital last night too.

The First Lady visited with her husband twice yesterday. John had one brief chat with his father, who has been in an oxygen tent since he was hospitalized. Physicians said the tent is standard procedure in coronary cases because it enables patients to get complete rest.

Each medical bulletin on Eisenhower's condition was being telephoned to Vice President Nixon in Washington before being made public. And a White House aide gave reports by telephone to each of the President's four brothers.

Nixon had been scheduled to come to Denver today to preside at a conference Eisenhower had called for Tuesday and Wednesday on how to build the physical fitness of America's youth. Eisenhower's illness brought cancellation of the conference and Nixon decided to remain in Washington.

Until yesterday noon the President's only nourishment had been fruit juices. Then he asked for and got a bowl of oatmeal and ate it all.

Hagerty, who cut his vacation short and flew to Denver when Eisenhower was stricken, reported that the President has slept a good deal in the hospital.

In response to questions, Hagerty said there was no indication as yet how long Eisenhower would have to remain in the hospital. He also said no consideration was being given to moving the President back to Washington.

Five Persons Suffer Injuries In District Weekend Accidents

At least five persons were injured in traffic accidents in Pickaway County over the weekend.

One woman was seriously hurt in a crash at the intersection of Routes 104 and 56, three miles northwest of Circleville. A blinker light has frequently been urged for the crossing, one of the district's most dangerous.

The accident at that intersection happened about 11:10 p. m. Saturday when a car driven by G. Ross Courtwright, 60, of 1242 S. Pickaway St., was struck by a truck driven by Charles W. Redwoldt, 37, of Hamilton, Mich. Deputy Sheriff Dwight Radcliff, who investigated the crash, said Courtwright was turning left at the time from Route 104 into Route 56.

The truck, the deputy said, was attempting to pass the smaller vehicle in a heavy fog at the time of the accident.

Carrie Courtwright, a passenger in the car, suffered a possible broken back and was taken to Berger Hospital.

DEPUTY Radcliff said Redwoldt had been ordered to appear in city court to face an accusation of driving left of yellow line.

U.S. To Offer Arms To Egypt

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States is trying to counter with its own offer a Russian bid to sell arms to Egypt. Such a sale of American weapons would surely bring a protest from Israel.

The American offer was made on the theory that United States security would be weakened if Russia became an arms supplier to Middle Eastern countries.

Egypt was described as very much interested in the American offer but was reportedly seeking American financial aid to buy the military equipment.

Israel regards any attempt to bolster the armed forces of the Arab countries as a threat to its own security.

America's Famous Best Seller "GIFT FROM THE SEA"

Anne Lindbergh Discovers the Values of the Inner Life

By ANNE MORROW LINDBERGH

This is the third installment of one of the most discussed books of our time, Anne Morrow Lindbergh's best-seller "Gift from the Sea."

I walked far down the beach, soothed by the rhythm of the waves, the sun on my bare back and legs, the wind and mist from the spray on my hair. Into the waves and out like a sandpiper. And then home, drenched, drugged, reeling, full to the brim with my day alone; full like the moon before the night has taken a single nibble of it; full as a cup poured up to the lip. There is a quality to fullness that the Psalmist expressed: "My cup runneth over." Let no one come—I pray in sudden panic—I might spill myself away!

Is this then what happens to woman? She wants perpetually to spill herself away. All her instinct as a woman—the eternal nourisher of children, of men, of society—demands that she give. Her time, her energy, her creativeness drain out into these channels if there is any chance, any leak. Traditionally we are taught, and instinctively we long, to give where it is needed—and immediately. Eternally, woman spills herself away in dribbles to the thirsty, seldom being allowed the time, the quiet, the peace, to let the pitcher fill up to the brim.

But why not, one may ask? What is wrong with woman's spilling herself away, since it is her function to give? Why am I, coming back from my perfect day at the beach, so afraid of losing my treasure? It is not just the artist in me. The artist, naturally, always resents giving himself in small drops. He must save up for the pitcher-full. No, it is also the woman in me who is so unexpectedly miserly.

Here is a strange paradox. Woman instinctively wants to give, yet resents giving herself in small pieces. Basically this is a conflict? Or is it an over-simplification of a many-stranded problem? I believe that what woman resents is not so much giving herself in pieces as giving herself purposelessly. What we fear is not so much that our energy may be leaking away through small outlets as that it may be going "down the drain." We do not see the results of our giving as concretely as man does in his work. In the job of home-keeping there is no raise from the boss, and seldom praise from others to show us we have hit the mark. Except for the child, woman's creation is so often invisible, especially today. We are working at an arrangement in form, of the myriad disparate details of housework, family routine, and social life. It is a kind of intricate game of cat's-cradle we manipulate on our fingers, with invisible threads. How can one point to this constant tangle of household chores, errands, and fragments of human relationships, as a creation? It is hard even to think of it as purposeful activity, so much of it is automatic. Woman herself begins to feel like a telephone exchange or a laundromat.

Purposeful giving is not as apt to deplete one's resources; it belongs to that natural order of giving that seems to renew itself even in the act of depletion. The more one gives, the more one has to give—like milk in the breast. In our early pioneer days and recently in war-time Europe, difficult as it was, woman's giving was purposeful, indispensable. Today, in our comparative comfort, many women hardly feel indispensable any more, either in the primitive struggle to survive or as the cultural font of the home. No longer fed by a feeling of indispensability or purposefulness, we are hungry, and not knowing what we are hungry for, we fill up the void with endless distractions, always at hand—unnecessary errands, compulsive duties, social niceties. And for the most part, to little purpose. Suddenly the spring is dry; the well is empty.

Hunger cannot, of course, be fed merely by a feeling of indispensability. Even purposeful giving must have some source that refills it. The milk in the breast must be replenished by food taken into the body. If it is woman's function to give, she must be replenished too. But how?

Solitude, says the moon shell. Every person, especially every woman, should be alone sometime during the year, some part of each week, and each day. How revolutionary that sounds and how impossible of attainment. To many women such a program seems quite out of reach. They have no extra income to spend on a vacation for themselves; no time left over from the weekly drudgery of housework for a day off; no energy after the daily cooking, cleaning and washing for even an hour of creative solitude.

Is this then only an economic problem? I do not think so. Every paid worker, no matter where in the economic scale, expects a day off a week and a vacation a year. By and large, mothers and housewives are the only workers who do not have regular time off. They are the great vacationless class. They rarely even complain of their lack, apparently not considering occasional time to themselves as a justifiable need.

Herein lies one key to the problem. If women were convinced that a day off or an hour of solitude was a reasonable ambition, they would find a way of attaining it. As it is, they feel so unjustified in their demand that they rarely make the attempt. One has only to look at those women who actually have the economic means or the time and energy for solitude yet do not use it, to realize that the problem is not solely economic. It is more a question of inner convictions than of outer pressures, though, of course, the outer pressures are there and make it more difficult. As far as the search for solitude is concerned, we live in a negative atmosphere as invisible, as all-pervasive, and as enervating as high humidity on an August afternoon. The world today does not understand, in either man or woman, the need to be alone.

How inexplicable it seems. Anything else will be accepted as a better excuse. If one sets aside time for a business appointment, a trip to the hairdresser, a social engagement, or a shopping expedition, that time is accepted as inviolable. But if one says: I cannot come because that is my hour to be alone, one is considered rude, egotistical or strange. What a commentary on our civilization, when being alone is considered suspect; when one has to apologize for it, make excuses, hide the fact that one practices it—like a secret vice!

Actually these are among the most important times in one's life—when one is alone. Certain springs are tapped only when we are alone. The artist knows he must be alone to create; the writer, to work out his thoughts; the musician, to compose; the saint, to pray. But women need solitude in order to find again the true essence of themselves: that firm strand which will be the indispensable center of a whole web of human relationships. She must find that inner stillness which Charles Morgan describes as "the stilling of the soul within the activities of the mind and body so that it might be still as the axis of a revolving wheel is still."

This beautiful image is to my mind the one that women could hold before their eyes. This is an end toward which we could strive—to be the still axis within the revolving wheel of relationships, obligations, and activities. Solitude alone is not the answer to this; it is only a step toward it, a mechanical aid, like the "room of one's own" demanded for women, before they could make their place in the world. The problem is not entirely in finding the room of one's own, the time alone, difficult and necessary as this is. The problem is more how to still the soul in the midst of its activities. In fact, the problem is how to feed the soul.

For it is the spirit of woman that is going dry, not the mechanics that are wanting. Mechanically, woman has gained in the past generation. Certainly in America, our lives are easier, freer, more open to opportunities, thanks—among other things—to the Feminist battles. The room of one's own, the time alone are now more possible in a wider economic class than ever before. But these hard-won prizes are insufficient because we have not yet learned how to use them. The Feminists did not look that far ahead; they laid down no rules of conduct. For them it was enough to demand the privileges. The exploration of their use, as in all pioneer movements, was left open to the women who would follow. And woman today is still searching. We are aware of our hunger and needs, but still ignorant of what will satisfy them. With our garnered free time, we are more apt to drain our creative springs than to refill them. With our pitchers, we attempt sometimes to water a field, not a garden. We throw ourselves indiscriminately into committees and causes. Not knowing how to feed the spirit, we try to muffle its demands in distractions. Instead of stilling the center, the axis of the wheel, we add more centrifugal activities to our lives—which tend to throw us off balance.

Mechanically we have gained, in the last generation, but spiritually we have, I think, unwittingly lost. In other times, women had in their lives more forces which centered them whether or not they realized it; sources which nourished them whether or not they consciously went to these springs. Their very seclusion in the home gave them time alone. Many of their duties were conducive to a quiet contemplative drawing together of the self. They had more creative tasks to perform. Nothing feeds the center so much as creative work, even humble kinds like cooking and sewing. Baking bread, weaving cloth, putting up preserves, teaching and singing to children, must have been far more nourishing than being the family chauffeur or shopping at super-markets, or doing housework with mechanical aids. The art and craft of housework has diminished; much of the time-consuming drudgery—despite modern advertising to the contrary—remains. In housework, as in the rest of life, the curtain of mechanization has come down between the mind and the hand.

The church, too, has always been a great centering force for women. Through what ages women have had that quiet hour, free of interruption, to draw themselves together. No wonder woman has been the mainstay of the church. Here were the advantages of the room of her own, the time alone, the quiet, the peace, all rolled into one and sanctioned by the approval of both family and community. Here no one could intrude with a careless call, "Mother," "Wife," "Mistress." Here, finally and more deeply, woman was whole, not split into a thousand functions. She was able to give herself completely in that hour in worship, in prayer, in communion, and be completely accepted. And in that giving and acceptance she was renewed; the springs were refilled.

The church is still a great centering force

for men and women, more needed than ever before—as its increasing membership shows. But are those who attend as ready to give themselves or to receive its message as they used to be? Our daily life does not prepare us for contemplation. How can a single weekly hour of church, helpful as it may be, counteract the many daily hours of distraction that surround it? If we had our contemplative hour at home we might be readier to give ourselves at church and find ourselves more completely renewed. For the need for renewal is still there. The desire to be accepted whole, the desire to be seen as an individual, not as a collection of functions, the desire to give oneself completely and purposefully pursues us always, and has its part in pushing us into more and more distractions, illusory love affairs, or the haven of hospitals and doctors' offices.

The answer is not in going back, in putting woman in the home and giving her the broom and the needle again. A number of mechanical aids save us time and energy. But neither is the answer in dissipating our time and energy in more purposeless occupations, more accumulations which supposedly simplify life but actually burden it, more possessions which we have not time to use or appreciate, more diversions to fill up the void.

In other words, the answer is not in the feverish pursuit of centrifugal activities which only lead in the end to fragmentation. Woman's life today is tending more and more toward the state William James describes so well in the German word, "Zerissenheit"—torn-to-pieces-hood. She cannot live perpetually in "Zerissenheit." She will be shattered into a thousand pieces. On the contrary, she must consciously encourage those pursuits which oppose the centrifugal forces of today. Quiet time alone, contemplation, prayer, music, a centering line of thought or reading, of study or work. It can be physical or intellectual or artistic, any creative life proceeding from oneself. It need not be an enormous project or a great work. But it should be something of one's own. Arranging a bowl of flowers in the morning can give a sense of quiet in a crowded day—like writing a poem, or saying a prayer. What matters is that one be for a time inwardly attentive.

Solitude, says the moon shell. Center down, say the Quaker saints. To the possession of the self the way is inward, says Plotinus. The cell of self-knowledge is the stall in which the pilgrim must be reborn, says St. Catherine of Siena. Voices from the past, these are pursuits and virtues of the past. But done in another way today because done consciously, aware, with eyes open. Not done as before, as part of the pattern of the time. Not done because everyone else is doing them; almost no one is doing them. Revolutionary, in fact, because almost every trend and pressure, every voice from the outside is against this new way of inward living.

Woman must be the pioneer in this turning inward for strength. In a sense she has always been the pioneer. Less able, until the last generation, to escape into outward activities, the very limitations of her life forced her to look inward. And from looking inward she gained an inner strength which man in his outward active life did not as often find. But in our recent efforts to emancipate ourselves, to prove ourselves the equal of man, we have, naturally enough perhaps, been drawn into competing with him in his outward activities, to the neglect of our own inner springs. Why have we been seduced into abandoning this timeless inner strength of woman for the temporal outer strength of man? This outer strength of man is essential to the pattern, but even here the reign of purely outer strength and purely outward solutions seems to be waning today. Men, too, are being forced to look inward—to find inner solutions as well as outer ones. Perhaps this change marks a new stage of maturity for modern extrovert, activist, materialistic Western man. Can it be that he is beginning to realize that the kingdom of heaven is within?

Moon shell, who named you? Some intuitive woman I like to think. I shall give you another name—Island shell. I cannot live forever on my island. But I can take you back to my desk in Connecticut. You will sit there and fasten your single eye upon me. You will make me think, with your smooth circles winding inward to the tiny core, of the island I lived on for a few weeks. You will say to me "solitude." You will remind me that I must try to be alone for part of each year, even a week or a few days; and for part of each day, even for an hour or a few minutes in order to keep my core, my center, my island-quality. You will remind me that unless I keep the island-quality intact somewhere within me, I will have little to give my husband, my children, my friends or the world at large. You will remind me that woman must be still as the axis of a wheel in the midst of her activities; that she must be the pioneer in achieving this stillness, not only for her own salvation, but for the salvation of family life, of society, perhaps even of our civilization.

America's Famous Best Seller "GIFT FROM THE SEA"

Anne Lindbergh Discovers the Values of the Inner Life

By ANNE MORROW LINDBERGH

(This is the third installment of one of the most discussed books of our time, Anne Morrow Lindbergh's best-seller "Gift from the Sea.")

I walked far down the beach, soothed by the rhythm of the waves, the sun on my bare back and legs, the wind and mist from the spray on my hair. Into the waves and out like a sandpiper. And then home, drenched, drugged, reeling, full to the brim with my day alone; full like the moon before the night has taken a single nibble of it; full as a cup poured up to the lip. There is a quality to fullness that the Psalmist expressed: "My cup runneth over." Let no one come—I pray in sudden panic—I might spill myself away!

Is this then what happens to woman? She wants perpetually to spill herself away. All her instinct as a woman—the eternal nourisher of children, of men, of society—demands that she give. Her time, her energy, her creativeness drain out into these channels if there is any chance, any leak. Traditionally we are taught, and instinctively we long, to give where it is needed—and immediately. Eternally, woman spills herself away in dribbles to the thirsty, seldom being allowed the time, the quiet, the peace, to let the pitcher fill up to the brim.

But why not, one may ask? What is wrong with woman's spilling herself away, since it is her function to give? Why am I, coming back from my perfect day at the beach, so afraid of losing my treasure? It is not just the artist in me. The artist, naturally, always resents giving himself in small drops. He must save up for the pitcher-full. No, it is also the woman in me who is so unexpectedly miserly.

Here is a strange paradox. Woman instinctively wants to give, yet resents giving herself in small pieces. Basically this is a conflict? Or is it an over-simplification of a many-stranded problem? I believe that what woman resents is not so much giving herself in pieces as giving herself purposelessly. What we fear is not so much that our energy may be leaking away through small outlets as that it may be going "down the drain." We do not see the results of our giving as concretely as man does in his work. In the job of home-keeping there is no raise from the boss, and seldom praise from others to show us we have hit the mark. Except for the child, woman's creation is so often invisible, especially today. We are working at an arrangement in form, of the myriad disparate details of housework, family routine, and social life. It is a kind of intricate game of cat's-cradle we manipulate on our fingers, with invisible threads. How can one point to this constant tangle of household chores, errands, and fragments of human relationships, as a creation? It is hard even to think of it as purposeful activity, so much of it is automatic. Woman herself begins to feel like a telephone exchange or a laundromat.

Purposeful giving is not as apt to deplete one's resources; it belongs to that natural order of giving that seems to renew itself even in the act of depletion. The more one gives, the more one has to give—like milk in the breast. In our early pioneer days and recently in war-time Europe, difficult as it was, woman's giving was purposeful, indispensable. Today, in our comparative comfort, many women hardly feel indispensable any more, either in the primitive struggle to survive or as the cultural font of the home. No longer fed by a feeling of indispensability or purposefulness, we are hungry, and not knowing what we are hungry for, we fill up the void with endless distractions, always at hand—unnecessary errands, compulsive duties, social niceties. And for the most part, to little purpose. Suddenly the spring is dry; the well is empty.

Hunger cannot, of course, be fed merely by a feeling of indispensability. Even purposeful giving must have some source that refills it. The milk in the breast must be replenished by food taken into the body. If it is woman's function to give, she must be replenished too. But how?

Solitude, says the moon shell. Every person, especially every woman, should be alone sometime during the year, some part of each week, and each day. How revolutionary that sounds and how impossible of attainment. To many women such a program seems quite out of reach. They have no extra income to spend on a vacation for themselves; no time left over from the weekly drudgery of housework for a day off; no energy after the daily cooking, cleaning and washing for even an hour of creative solitude.

Is this then only an economic problem? I do not think so. Every paid worker, no matter where in the economic scale, expects a day off a week and a vacation a year. By and large, mothers and housewives are the only workers who do not have regular time off. They are the great vacationless class. They rarely even complain of their lack, apparently not considering occasional time to themselves as a justifiable need.

Herein lies one key to the problem. If women were convinced that a day off or an hour of solitude was a reasonable ambition, they would find a way of attaining it. As it is, they feel so unjustified in their demand that they rarely make the attempt. One has only to look at those women who actually have the economic means or the time and energy for solitude yet do not use it, to realize that the problem is not solely economic. It is more a question of inner convictions than of outer pressures, though, of course, the outer pressures are there and make it more difficult. As far as the search for solitude is concerned, we live in a negative atmosphere as invisible, as all-pervasive, and as enervating as high humidity on an August afternoon. The world today does not understand, in either man or woman, the need to be alone.

How inexplicable it seems. Anything else will be accepted as a better excuse. If one sets aside time for a business appointment, a trip to the hairdresser, a social engagement, or a shopping expedition, that time is accepted as inviolable. But if one says: I cannot come because that is my hour to be alone, one is considered rude, egotistical or strange. What a commentary on our civilization, when being alone is considered suspect; when one has to apologize for it, make excuses, hide the fact that one practices it—like a secret vice!

Actually these are among the most important times in one's life—when one is alone. Certain springs are tapped only when we are alone. The artist knows he must be alone to create; the writer, to work out his thoughts; the musician, to compose; the saint, to pray. But women need solitude in order to find again the true essence of themselves: that firm strand which will be the indispensable center of a whole web of human relationships. She must find that inner stillness which Charles Morgan describes as "the stilling of the soul within the activities of the mind and body so that it might be still as the axis of a revolving wheel is still."

This beautiful image is to my mind the one that women could hold before their eyes. This is an end toward which we could strive—to be the still axis within the revolving wheel of relationships, obligations, and activities. Solitude alone is not the answer to this; it is only a step toward it, a mechanical aid, like the "room of one's own" demanded for women, before they could make their place in the world. The problem is not entirely in finding the room of one's own, the time alone, difficult and necessary as this is. The problem is more how to still the soul in the midst of its activities. In fact, the problem is how to feed the soul.

For it is the spirit of woman that is going dry, not the mechanics that are wanting. Mechanically, woman has gained in the past generation. Certainly in America, our lives are easier, freer, more open to opportunities, thanks—among other things—to the Feminist battles. The room of one's own, the hour alone are now more possible in a wider economic class than ever before. But these hard-won prizes are insufficient because we have not yet learned how to use them. The Feminists did not look that far ahead; they laid down no rules of conduct. For them it was enough to demand the privileges. The exploration of their use, as in all pioneer movements, was left open to the women who would follow. And woman today is still searching. We are aware of our hunger and needs, but still ignorant of what will satisfy them. With our garnered free time, we are more apt to drain our creative springs than to refill them. With our pitchers, we attempt sometimes to water a field, not a garden. We throw ourselves indiscriminately into committees and causes. Not knowing how to feed the spirit, we try to muffle its demands in distractions. Instead of stilling the center, the axis of the wheel, we add more centrifugal activities to our lives—which tend to throw us off balance.

Mechanically we have gained, in the last generation, but spiritually we have, I think, unwittingly lost. In other times, women had in their lives more forces which centered them . . . they had more creative tasks to perform . . . Baking bread, weaving cloth, putting up preserves, teaching and singing to children, must have been far more nourishing than being the family chauffeur or shopping at super-markets, or doing housework with mechanical aids.

creative tasks to perform. Nothing feeds the center so much as creative work, even humble kinds like cooking and sewing. Baking bread, weaving cloth, putting up preserves, teaching and singing to children, must have been far more nourishing than being the family chauffeur or shopping at super-markets, or doing housework with mechanical aids. The art and craft of housework has diminished; much of the time-consuming drudgery—despite modern advertising to the contrary—remains. In housework, as in the rest of life, the curtain of mechanization has come down between the mind and the hand.

The church, too, has always been a great centering force for women. Through what ages women have had that quiet hour, free of interruption, to draw themselves together. No wonder woman has been the mainstay of the church. Here were the advantages of the room of her own, the time alone, the quiet, the peace, all rolled into one and sanctioned by the approval of both family and community. Here no one could intrude with a careless call, "Mother," "Wife," "Mistress." Here, finally and more deeply, woman was whole, not split into a thousand functions. She was able to give herself completely in that hour in worship, in prayer, in communion, and be completely accepted. And in that giving and acceptance she was renewed; the springs were refilled.

The church is still a great centering force

for men and women, more needed than ever before—as its increasing membership shows. But are those who attend as ready to give themselves or to receive its message as they used to be? Our daily life does not prepare us for contemplation. How can a single weekly hour of church, helpful as it may be, counteract the many daily hours of distraction that surround it? If we had our contemplative hour at home we might be readier to give ourselves at church and find ourselves more completely renewed. For the need for renewal is still there. The desire to be accepted whole, the desire to be seen as an individual, not as a collection of functions, the desire to give oneself completely and purposefully pursues us always, and has its part in pushing us into more and more distractions, illusory love affairs, or the haven of hospitals and doctors' offices.

The answer is not in going back, but putting woman in the home and giving her the broom and the needle again. A number of mechanical aids save us time and energy. But neither is the answer in dissipating our time and energy in more purposeless occupations, more accumulations which supposedly simplify life but actually burden it, more possessions which we have not time to use or appreciate, more diversions to fill up the void.

In other words, the answer is not in the feverish pursuit of centrifugal activities which only lead in the end to fragmentation. Woman's life today is tending more and more toward the state William James describes so well in the German word, "Zerrissenheit"—torn-to-pieces-hood. She cannot live perpetually in "Zerrissenheit." She will be shattered into a thousand pieces. On the contrary, she must consciously encourage those pursuits which oppose the centrifugal forces of today. Quiet time alone, contemplation, prayer, music, a centering line of thought or reading, of study or work. It can be physical or intellectual or artistic, any creative life proceeding from oneself. It need not be an enormous project or a great work. But it should be something of one's own. Arranging a bowl of flowers in the morning can give a sense of quiet in a crowded day—like writing a poem, or saying a prayer. What matters is that one be for a time inwardly attentive.

Solitude, says the moon shell. Center down, say the Quaker saints. To the possession of the self the way is inward, says Plotinus. The cell of self-knowledge is the stall in which the pilgrim must be reborn, says St. Catherine of Siena. Voices from the past. In fact, these are pursuits and virtues of the past. National Crisis Feared

American Water Resources Dwindling Toward Disaster

Editor's Note: America's water resources are dwindling so rapidly our agricultural and industrial advancement is threatened with disaster — in some cases within a decade. Here, in the first of five articles on the shortage of water, is the story behind an approaching national crisis.)

By ROGER D. GREENE
AP Newsfeatures Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — America's thirty cities, factories and farms today are scooping water from the nation's rain barrel with a giant dipper. There's trouble ahead. Men have fought and died for water. Civilizations have perished for lack of it, and experts warn disaster could strike again unless U. S. communities awaken to the danger.

President Eisenhower underscored the urgency of the problem last year when he set up a cabinet committee on water resources and declared:

"If we are to advance agriculturally and industrially we must make the best use of every drop of water which falls on our soil or which can be extracted from the oceans."

More than 1,000 American cities and towns have water shortage problems. More and more, they are reaching out — sometimes hundreds of miles — for additional water supplies to keep pace with the 20th century's "explosion" of population and the vast expansion of industry since World War II. Denver, fastest growing city in the mountain West, reports, for example, that without more water its industrial growth will be stopped dead by 1963.

Underground water tables are reported lowering in most of the United States — alarmingly in some regions — with the drop averaging 40 feet from Texas to California in recent years. This summer ground-water tables dropped to all-time record low levels in many states. Even the humid East is feeling the pinch.

Wells in Atlantic City, N. J., used to flow at 20 to 25 feet above sea level. Now the ground-water level has dropped to 85 feet below the sea.

Over-pumping of wells to supply mushrooming populations and industry has led to the seepage of salt water into fresh water supplies along coastal areas — notably in California, New Jersey, Long Island, N. Y., Louisiana and Florida — and in Los Angeles it has caused the land to sink eight feet in some spots.

But what gives nightmares to federal and state authorities is the possible long-range effect on human health arising from the flushing of millions of tons of noxious chemicals, oils, acids, grease and other industrial waste into the nation's waterways.

Amid growing countrywide shortages, one out of every seven cities with a 10,000-plus population has to restrict the use of water at times. Average U. S. rainfall is 30 inches a year — some 4,300 billion gallons a day — ranging from 120 inches in the Pacific Northwest to less than five inches in the arid southwest plains.

Altogether, that's enough water to fill a lake the size of the state of California 50 feet deep.

The U. S. Geological Survey, which keeps track of water supplies, says American farms, homes and factories withdraw about 200 billion gallons a day from wells, lakes and streams.

Thus actual usage is only a drop in the bucket compared to the enormous amount that falls as rain. But untold billions of gallons are lost as they evaporate or run off to the sea. And much of our surface water is so polluted it is no longer fit for use; in the words of the U. S. Health Department, much of it is "sick water."

Moses saved his people from thirst by smiting a rock and bringing forth water. Modern science may have to perform a 20th century version of the same miracle. . . .

No sooner did the two start for the submarine Sunday when their parked car began to roll, gained momentum and was launched — right in the river.

Record Signup Seen For OSU

COLUMBUS (AP) — Registrar Ronald B. Thompson of Ohio State University says he expects about 1,000 more students than last year when OSU classes open tomorrow.

He said an expected 7,000 new enrollees this year will probably bring registration to about 21,500 students, drawn from every Ohio county, every U. S. state, some American territories and about 50 foreign countries.

Coming: Checks Built Into Compacts; Perfumed, Too

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

One day soon you may get perfumed checks and compacts with built-in checkbooks. If American bankers continue their efforts to woo feminine customers.

It seems the bankers are really serious about this drive to glamorize their business, ever since they discovered that outside the metropolitan centers women do 85 per cent of the family banking.

Since it is mama who usually holds the family purse strings, does most of the spending and cashes the paychecks, it has dawned on the banking fraternity that she also is likely to patronize the bank that makes her feel most at home.

So nowadays the country's banks are tripping over each other in their efforts to make banking as much fun as shopping in the supermarket.

Some of this may be due to the fact that there are at present some 8,500 women officers in U. S. banks and more than 293,000 women bank employees, according to officials of the New York State Bankers Assn., which is sponsoring Know-Your-Bank Week, Oct. 16-22.

Women bank executives just naturally understand how women like to do their banking. Like Miss Agnes Cooney, assistance vice president of the Stamford Trust Co., Stamford, Conn., who says:

"One of our most successful innovations has been drive-in banking. We have two drive-in branches in Darien, Conn., where women can drive up their station wagons on their way to the beach, wearing their bathing suits if they want to, and attend to the family banking. We're planning more of these, because the women like them."

Mrs. Irma Robins, assistant public relations director of the Franklin National Bank, Franklin Square, N. Y., says:

"You ought to see our baby carriage window. We have a special knee-high desk and a teller's window just 28 inches high for children bank customers. And each child gets a lollipop with each visit."

It's hard to tell what will come next — maybe a banking department in the corner supermarket, or a laundromat section in the neighborhood bank, where you can get your washing done while you deposit pop's pay.

National Crisis Feared

American Water Resources Dwindling Toward Disaster

Editor's Note: America's water resources are dwindling so rapidly our agricultural and industrial advancement is threatened with disaster — in some cases within a decade. Here, in the first of five articles on the shortage of water, is the story behind an approaching national crisis.

By ROGER D. GREENE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's thirsty cities, factories and farms today are scooping water from the nation's rain barrel with a giant dipper. There's trouble ahead.

Men have fought and died for water. Civilizations have perished for lack of it, and experts warn disaster could strike again unless U. S. communities awaken to the danger.

President Eisenhower underscored the urgency of the problem last year when he set up a cabinet committee on water resources and declared:

"If we are to advance agriculturally and industrially we must make the best use of every drop of water which falls on our soil or which can be extracted from the oceans."

More than 1,000 American cities and towns have water shortage problems. More and more, they are reaching out — sometimes hundreds of miles — for additional water supplies to keep pace with the 20th century's "explosion" of population and the vast expansion of industry since World War II.

Denver, fastest growing city in the mountain West, reports, for example, that without more water its industrial growth will be stopped dead by 1963.

Underground water tables are reported lowering in most of the United States — alarmingly in some regions — with the drop averaging 40 feet from Texas to California in recent years. This summer ground-water tables dropped to all-time record low levels in many states. Even the humid East is feeling the pinch.

Wells in Atlantic City, N. J., used to flow at 20 to 25 feet above sea level. Now the ground-water level has dropped to 85 feet below the sea.

Over-pumping of wells to supply mushrooming populations and industry has led to the seepage of salt water into fresh water supplies along coastal areas — notably in California, New Jersey, Long Island, N. Y., Louisiana and Florida — and in Los Angeles it has caused the land to sink eight feet in some spots.

But what gives nightmares to federal and state authorities is the possible long-range effect on human health arising from the flushing of millions of tons of noxious chemicals, oils, acids, grease and other industrial waste into the nation's waterways.

Amid growing countrywide shortages, one out of every seven cities with a 10,000-plus population has to restrict the use of water at times. Average U. S. rainfall is 30 inches a year — some 4,300 billion gallons a day — ranging from 120 inches in the Pacific Northwest to less than five inches in the arid southwest plains.

Altogether, that's enough water to fill a lake the size of the state of California 50 feet deep.

The U. S. Geological Survey, which keeps track of water supplies, says American farms, homes and factories withdraw about 200 billion gallons a day from wells, lakes and streams.

Thus actual usage is only a drop in the bucket compared to the enormous amount that falls as rain. But untold billions of gallons are lost as they evaporate or run off to the sea. And much of our surface water is so polluted it is no longer fit for use; in the words of the U. S. Health Department, much of it is "sick water."

Moses saved his people from thirst by smiting a rock and bringing forth water. Modern science may have to perform a 20th century version of the same miracle.

DETROIT (AP) — Mrs. Eileen Whelan didn't have to board the submarine Tambo on the Detroit River to show her 11-year-old son an underwater craft.

No sooner did the two start for the submarine Sunday when their parked car began to roll, gained momentum and was launched — right in the river.

Coming: Checks Built Into Compacts; Perfumed, Too

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

One day soon you may get perfumed checks and compacts with built-in checkbooks, if American bankers continue their efforts to woo feminine customers.

It seems the bankers are really serious about this drive to glamorize their business, ever since they discovered that outside the metropolitan centers women do 85 per cent of the family banking.

Since it is mama who usually holds the family purse strings, does most of the spending and cashes the paychecks, it has dawned on the banking fraternity that she also is likely to patronize the bank that makes her feel most at home.

So nowadays the country's banks are tripping over each other in their efforts to make banking as much fun as shopping in the supermarket.

Some of this may be due to the fact that there are at present some 8,500 women officers in U. S. banks and more than 293,000 women bank employees, according to officials of the New York State Bankers Assn., which is sponsoring Know-Your-Bank Week, Oct. 16-22.

Women bank executives just naturally understand how women like to do their banking. Like Miss Agnes Cooney, assistance vice president of the Stamford Trust Co., Stamford, Conn., who says:

"One of our most successful innovations has been drive-in banking. We have two drive-in branches in Darien, Conn., where women can drive up their station wagons on their way to the beach, wearing their bathing suits if they want to, and attend to the family banking. We're planning more of these, because the women like them."

Mrs. Irma Robins, assistant public relations director of the Franklin National Bank, Franklin Square, N. Y., says:

This is a scientific expectation that a rocket ship traveling at nearly the speed of light would change the space voyager's life span so that he would return to earth while still in his prime long after his contemporaries had died of old age.

Physicists say that theories worked out by the late Albert Einstein purport to show that a man traveling at 99 per cent of the speed of light would age at but one-seventh of the rate of the normal aging process. Hence, such a space traveler, voyaging to a star 100 light years away, would be able to make the trip in 14 years by his own rocket-ship time, and return in another 14 years.

But while this was transpiring in space, these scientists aver, two centuries would have run their course on the earth-bound calendar.

Before this theory respecting the relativity of time can be proved, it will be necessary to propel a rocket ship at a velocity approaching the speed of light, or 186,000 miles a second. This is where the physicist theorists and practitioners part company.

A fuel powerful enough to come anywhere near doing the job is neither known nor in prospect. The most man can hope for at the moment is a lumbering 15 miles per second. At such a pace he would require a month to get to Mars.

WHAT'S THIS

CHRISTMAS cards are now sold the year round, and nobody thinks much of it when offered these works of art in late summer or early fall. The only significance attached to such an occurrence is that some sales person wants to beat competition by being first.

But when a news item reveals that the Post Office Department is making arrangements in several big cities to handle the expected rush of Christmas packages and cards, it's time to inquire what goes on. Surely this is September, isn't it—and Christmas is far off?

Well, perhaps. But the Post Office Department knows that the annual period when post offices in every section of the nation handle 10 times the usual volume of mail is just around the corner. Figuratively speaking, that is. Extra space must be rented to handle the huge volume of mail. Extra transportation must be provided for. Extra clerks must be lined up. And these things cannot be taken care of in a day or a week.

Christmas is still relatively far off, but the Post Office Department is getting ready for it. And that has an ominous sound.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Some years ago, Frank Costello, who had the reputation of being the Czar of the rackets in the United States, wanted to be popular and acceptable. He hired a press agent and soon newspapers and magazines were publishing articles on the life and affairs of the aforesaid Costello. He was painted as a sort of New York Robin Hood.

Personally, I have never met Costello. But I did feel at the time of the publicity campaign that Costello made a serious mistake in hiring a press agent. Some people do better when nobody knows they are alive.

So now it has come to pass that whenever anybody wants to smear somebody else, he associates him with Costello. For instance, in the unseemly fracas, in the press, in which Governor George M. Leader of Pennsylvania accused the Republicans of surrounding the President with an underworld and the President's Assistant Press Secretary accused the Democrats of being associated with the underworld, Frank Costello is dragged in obliquely.

"Did you ever hear of Frank Costello?" That is the question that is supposed to slay you. No one says that Adlai Stevenson or Averell Harriman is associated with Frank Costello, but just by dragging his name into the situation, the implication is set forth that he has something to do with someone or something and figure it out for yourself. If you can't figure it out, the fault is yours.

Apparently the politicians have nothing to say about each other, so they resort to the time-honored method of slinging mud. It does not make sense; it is poor taste. If we have to have more than a year of that between now and the next Election Day, the public is going to be disgusted with both parties and it will stay away from the polls. We want a political debate, not an exhibition of bad manners.

Nobody has nominated Frank Costello for any public office. If the suggestion is that Costello is bribing the public to keep his chosen men in office, there ought to be some evidence on the subject. I live in New York and know something about its public personalities and Costello is not a factor. Perhaps it was not always so, but it is so today.

There was a time when the Democrats were always running against Herbert Hoover. Alf Landon, Wendell Wilkie, Thomas E. Dewey and Dwight D. Eisenhower ran on the Republican tickets, but always it was Herbert Hoover who was running and who had to be smeared. Hoover took it in his stride, but it was a low trick on the American people.

The real trouble is that neither Governor Leader nor Murray Snyder, the President's press man, really had anything to say to each other. This "underworld" talk was a substitution for talking about the world. Neither party is sure what their world will be in 1956. Mr. Eisenhower, for instance, was wonderfully brave and clever at Geneva but he did not get anything concrete from the Russians and now Khrushchev explains that the smiles were all right but that nothing has really changed. And Khrushchev probably spoke from a compulsion to do a little kicking around.

MARRIAGE for THREE

By ELIZABETH SEIFERT

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
THE SISTERS at the hospital did indeed jump at the offer of Ann's help; they indicated that they would use as many hours as Ann might want to give them. Right now they were short handed in the lab, and if she could keep records...

Less than a week later she found herself taking a station wagon full of lab and X-ray personnel down the highway for a picnic near Bernalillo. There was a certain irrigation ditch there, with a grove of trees. They'd brought food, some prepared, some to cook.

The group was an odd assortment. There were the lab girls, the doctor-pathologist, the white-crowned Sisters and Ann in her pretty green play suit.

They put the car in a convenient place, and decided to explore the Pueblo which had recently been the victim of modern science. Ann herself recalled that disastrous day, and the stories told by these new friends increased its vividness.

Clouds had rolled across their famous blue sky, lightning had flashed, rain had come down—not just the usual brief squall, but a downpour that lasted for hours. An underground thing on the mesa, Albuquerque, they said people had run to the churches to pray—arroyos had gushed with white floods, the Santa Fe right-of-way had carried a river which had broken through the dike and poured across this Pueblo, dissolving the adobe walls into their original mud. And now the place stood deserted and forlorn. What had been houses—hogans—for years and years, now sat melted like chocolate candies exposed to the sun.

"Scientists or no," declared Sister Charles, "you cannot interfere with the ways of God. He put the desert in this place; the rain makers should be restrained!"

Dr. Jungers teased her mildly, and she retorted perkily. The irrigation ditch made a fine place for their picnic; its banks afforded shelter from the wind, and the aspens gave them twigs to burn.

Ann had brought only a sweater, and Sister Gertrude asked if she was not cold.

"A little," said Ann ruefully. "I should have worn my longies."

"Ha!" declared the tall Religious. "I'll venture to say that I'm the only one here who's ever worn the things."

"And I!" claimed Sister Charles. "Well, I didn't know," retorted Sister Gertrude. "You're rather..."

vain about your figure."

That, of course, was a great joke. Sister Charles was as round as a ball.

But she was the best of them all at the game of baseball in which they engaged before cooking lunch. She could pitch and she could hit. Finally she socked a ringing homer, and the feminine cheers were augmented by two hearty masculine voices. Not Dr. Jungers—he was busy with the fire.

The girls and the Sisters looked up, startled at the two young men who were seated on the ditch edge, swinging their books and grinning. In fact, it was hard to tell about their rank. They were Air Force, the tall one said, from Kirtland. Lt. Riley—Chuck—and Sgt. Dunning—Ike. They seemed to be stuck. His thumb jerked over his shoulder. They'd seen the station wagon and wondered if they could ask for a push.

He was an engaging chap with a deep scar along one cheek. Ann was brought forward as the station wagon owner, and the young men's eyes brightened. "Hello, Ann," they acknowledged the introduction.

"I'll be glad to push you," she said.

"Can you drive pretty well?" asked the young pilot.

"Well," she retorted. "I came down here without getting stalled."

That made the sergeant roar, and the girls all joined in.

"We're just about ready to cook lunch," said Sister Charles. "If you boys..."

"Don't ever offer a serviceman food, ma'am," drawled the sergeant, "without a thick towel wrapped around your hand."

Ann had a minute to realize that Dr. Bates' prescription was working. Certainly she was out of her "mood." In fact, she was having a wonderful time. Two or three of the lab girls were more than just pretty, but none got more flattered attention than Ann. The young lieutenant filled her plate, and sat beside her.

"Think nothing of it," razzed the sergeant. "He simply cannot resist a Chrysler."

It was all young, and foolish, and carefree. They ate hungrily; they laughed, and sang.

"For miles around," declared Dr. Jungers, "the hens will stop laying, and the cows won't give milk."

The sergeant offered to tell how he got his scar, but was restrained by his companion. "If necessary, I'll pull a little rank," the lieutenant said, smiling.

"Well," said Sister Gertrude.

Vicki, North Carolina's runaway elephant, has given so much trouble it's a wonder they don't name a hurricane after her.

In Pusseldorf, Germany, a recorded phone service gives with a daily recipe plus a new joke. Can diplomatically, "tell us what you do in the Air Force."

The sergeant said he was a flight engineer.

It was lots of fun—the two young men showed a deal of breeding in the way they thanked the Sisters for their hospitality.

"I'd love to hear the story you'll make of this adventure by the time you get back to your base," said Sister Charles, laughing.

Ike Dunning looked around the group. "I don't know..." he said. "Seems as if I could tell the truth and sound pretty good. Two handsome fly-boys rescued by a picnic of beautiful women, saved from starving, their help pulled out of the ditch by a gorgeous maiden."

"There are a few holes in your story, sergeant," the Sisters assured him.

"Name one! I dare you to say we're not handsome!"

"I wouldn't think of such a thing—but, well, your gorgeous maiden happens to be Mrs. Adam Laird."

"Oh, Sister!" moaned the young man.

"Hey, Ike," said Lieutenant Riley, "wasn't that the name of the couple up at the Lodge the week end before Easter? Don't you remember the storm, and that red-head?"

Ike gave him a withering look. "I remember the storm," he said flatly.

The lieutenant failed to receive the warning. "Adam Laird," he mused. "Yep, that was the name. Tall guy, with very blue eyes, and this luscious red-head. She had a wonderful laugh! But I guess you know her, don't you, Ann? Name's not common enough that in the same neighborhood you wouldn't..."

Ann had turned to pick up her bean pot; she'd take it with her, back to the car. "Yes," she said thinly, "I know Pinky."

She heard Ike growl something, and the lieutenant's protest. "Jeepers, Ike! I didn't mean anything! It's all odd name—but so what?"

Still, he attempted a sort of apology to Ann when the two young men joined her at the station wagon. She was holding out the keys; he'd better, she said, take on the job of pushing their "heap" out of the ditch. The sergeant could drive it...

"If I hurt your feelings, Ann—I'm sorry."

"It's all right," she said quietly. She guessed they got the jeep out, she guessed the rest of the afternoon passed somehow; she turned toward home.

These Days

Some years ago, Frank Costello, who had the reputation of being the Czar of the rackets in the United States, wanted to be popular and acceptable. He hired a press agent and soon newspapers and magazines were publishing articles on the life and affairs of the aforesaid Costello. He was painted as a sort of New York Robin Hood.

Personally, I have never met Costello. But I did feel at the time of the publicity campaign that Costello made a serious mistake in hiring a press agent. Some people do better when nobody knows they are alive.

So now it has come to pass that whenever anybody wants to smear somebody else, he associates him with Costello. For instance, in the unseemly fracas, in the press, in which Governor George M. Leader of Pennsylvania accused the Republicans of surrounding the President with an underworld and the President's Assistant Press Secretary accused the Democrats of being associated with the underworld, Frank Costello is dragged in obliquely.

"Did you ever hear of Frank Costello?" That is the question that is supposed to slay you. No one says that Adlai Stevenson or Averell Harriman is associated with Frank Costello, but just by dragging his name into the situation, the implication is set forth that he has something to do with someone or something and figure it out for yourself. If you can't figure it out, the fault is yours.

Apparently the politicians have nothing to say about each other, so they resort to the time-honored method of slinging mud. It does not make sense; it is poor taste. If we have to have more than a year of that between now and the next Election Day, the public is going to be disgusted with both parties and it will stay away from the polls. We want a political debate, not an exhibition of bad manners.

Nobody has nominated Frank Costello for any public office. If the suggestion is that Costello is bribing the public to keep his chosen men in office, there ought to be some evidence on the subject. I live in New York and know something about its public personalities and Costello is not a factor. Perhaps it was not always so, but it is so today.

There was a time when the Democrats were always running against Herbert Hoover. Alf Landon, Wendell Willkie, Thomas E. Dewey and Dwight D. Eisenhower ran on the Republican tickets, but always it was Herbert Hoover who was running and who had to be smeared. Hoover took it in his stride, but it was a low trick on the American people.

The real trouble is that neither Governor Leader nor Murray Snyder, the President's press man, really had anything to say to each other. This "underworld" talk was a substitution for talking about the world. Neither party is sure what their world will be in 1956. Mr. Eisenhower, for instance, was wonderfully brave and clever at Geneva but he did not get anything concrete from the Russians and now Khrushchev explains that the smiles were all right but that nothing has really changed. And Khrushchev probably spoke from a compulsion to do a little kicking around.

MARRIAGE for THREE

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
THE SISTERS at the hospital did indeed jump at the offer of Ann's help; they indicated that they would use as many hours as Ann might want to give them. Right now they were short handed in the lab, and if she could keep records...

Less than a week later she found herself taking a station wagon full of lab and X-ray personnel down the highway for a picnic near Bernalillo. There was a certain irrigation ditch there, with a grove of trees. They'd brought food, some prepared, some to cook.

The group was an odd assortment. There were the lab girls, the doctor-pathologist, and the white-crowned Sisters and Ann in her pretty green play suit.

They put the car in a convenient place, and decided to explore the Pueblo which had recently been the victim of modern science. Ann herself recalled that disastrous day, and the stories told by these new friends increased its vividness.

Clouds had rolled across their famous blue sky, lightning had flashed, rain had come down—not just the usual brief squall, but a downpour that lasted for hours. An unalloyed thing on the mesa.

In Albuquerque, they said people had run to the churches to pray—arroyos had gushed with white floods, the Santa Fe right-of-way had carried a river which had broken through the dike and poured across this Pueblo, dissolving the adobe walls into their original mud. And now the place stood deserted and forlorn. What had been houses—hogans—for years and years, now sat melted like chocolate candies exposed to the sun.

"Scientists or no," declared Sister Charles, "you cannot interfere with the ways of God. He put the desert in this place; the rain makers should be restrained!"

Dr. Junger teased her mildly, and she retorted perkily.

The irrigation ditch made a fine place for their picnic; its banks afforded shelter from the wind, and the aspens gave them twigs to burn.

Ann had brought only a sweater, and Sister Gertrude asked if she was not cold.

"A little," said Ann ruefully. "I should have worn my longies."

"Ha!" declared the tall Irishman. "I'll venture to say that I'm the only one here who's ever worn the things."

"And I!" claimed Sister Charles. "Well, I didn't know," retorted Sister Gertrude. "You're rather vain about your figure." That, of course, was a great joke. Sister Charles was as round as a ball.

But she was the best of them all at the game of baseball in which they engaged before cooking. She could pitch and she could hit. Finally she socked a ringing homer, and the feminine cheers were augmented by two hearty masculine voices. Not Dr. Junger—he was busy with the fire.

The girls and the young men looked up, startled at the two young men who were seated on the ditch edge, swinging their boots and grinning. In fatigue, it was hard to tell about their rank. They were Air Force, the tall one, from Kirtland, Lt. Riley—Chuck—and Sgt. Dunning—Ike. They seemed to be stuck. His thumb jerked over his shoulder. They'd seen the station wagon and wondered if they could ask for a push.

He was an engaging chap with a deep scar along one cheek. Ann was brought forward as the station wagon owner, and the young men's eyes brightened. "Hello, Ann," they acknowledged the introduction.

"I'll be glad to push you," she said.

"Can you drive pretty well?" asked the young pilot.

"Well," she retorted. "I came down here without getting stalled."

That made the sergeant roar, and the girls all joined in.

"We're just about ready to cook lunch," said Sister Charles. "If you boys..."

"Don't ever offer a serviceman food, ma'am," drawled the sergeant, "without a thick towel wrapped around your hand."

Ann had a minute to realize that Dr. Bates' prescription was working. Certainly she was out of her "mood." In fact, she was having a wonderful time. Two or three of the lab girls were more than just pretty, but none got more flattering attention than Ann. The young lieutenant filled her plate, and sat beside her.

"Think nothing of it," razzed the sergeant. "He simply cannot resist a Chrysler."

It was all young, and foolish, and carefree. They ate hungrily; they laughed, and sang.

"For miles around," declared Dr. Junger, "the hens will stop laying, and the cows won't give milk."

The sergeant offered to tell how he got his scar, but was restrained by his companion. "If necessary, I'll pull a little rank," the lieutenant said, smiling.

"Well," said Sister Gertrude.

diplomatically, "tell us what you do in the Air Force." The sergeant said he was a flight engineer.

It was lots of fun—the two young men showed a deal of breeding in the way they thanked the Sisters for their hospitality.

"I'd love to hear the story you'll make of this adventure by the time you get back to your base," said Sister Charles, laughing.

Ike Dunning looked around the group. "I don't know..." he said. "Seems as if I could tell the truth and sound pretty good. Two handsome fly-boys rescued by a picnic of beautiful women, saved from starving, their heap pulled out of the ditch by a gorgeous maiden."

"There are a few holes in your story, sergeant," the Sisters assured him.

"Name one! I dare you to say we're not handsome!"

"Oh, Sister," moaned the young man.

"Hey, Ike," said Lieutenant Riley, "wasn't that the name of the couple up at the Lodge the week end before Easter? Don't you remember the storm, and that red-head?"

Ike gave him a withering look. "I remember the storm," he said flatly.

The lieutenant failed to receive the warning. "Adam Laird," he mused. "Yep, that was the name. Tall guy, with very blue eyes, and this luscious red-head. She had a wonderful laugh! But I guess you know her, don't you, Ann? Name's not common enough that in the same neighborhood you wouldn't..."

Ann had turned to pick up her beer pot; she'd taken it with her, back to the car. "Yes," she said thinly. "I know Pinky."

She heard Ike growl something, and the lieutenant's protest. "Jeepers, Ike! I didn't mean anything! It's all odd name—but so what?"

Still, he attempted a sort of apology to Ann when the two young men joined her at the station wagon. She was holding out the keys; he'd better, she said, take on the job of pushing their "heap" out of the ditch. The sergeant could drive it.

"If I hurt your feelings, Ann—I'm sorry."

"It's all right," she said quietly. She guessed they got the jeep out, she guessed the rest of the afternoon passed somehow; she turned toward home.

Try, Stop Me

A sad-faced, stooped man in his forties wriggled in his chair while the medium gazed into her crystal ball and intoned, "You'll be unhappy, henpecked, and poverty-stricken until you're about sixty-five." The man brightened a bit and asked, "And what will happen to me after that?"

"After that," said the medium, "you'll get used to it."

"Wimpfheimer," said the philosophy professor, "I'm sure you can tell us who wrote 'Critique of Pure Reason.'" Wimpfheimer, who had had a hard night carousing at the Williamstown Book Shop, admitted sadly, "I. Kant. 'Amazing,' said the professor. 'This is the first correct answer you've given me in your five years as a Freshman!'"

Nation Too Crowded Now

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (A)—Are you suffering from "civilization sickness?"

You probably are if you find yourself getting fatigued without reason, irritated over trifles, and unjustifiably critical of yourself, your friends and members of your own family.

Every culture develops its own typical ailments. The typical ailment of America today is tension and strain, a condition which some theorists believe is the main cause of our growing crop of ulcers, heart attacks, divorces, and other diseases.

But what causes the tension? It isn't the difficulty in solving man's age-old problems of food, clothing and shelter. It really isn't overwork either, in my opinion, nor the result of too much ambition.

The average man isn't overly ambitious. And never in history before has he been able to achieve so comfortable an existence with so little labor.

Then what makes him so weary and cross, so upset and impatient, so afflicted with nameless ailments that puzzle his doctor because the doctor probably has them, too, and doesn't know what to call them? I think that our "civilization sickness" is no more than the penalty of feeling endlessly crowded. We are like a man with a 40-inch waist who insists on wearing a 36-inch belt. No wonder we are unhappy, bluish in temper, and see spots in front of our eyes. They aren't spots—they're people.

Actually, of course, we are more crowded. Our population has leaped from 75 million in 1900 to 165 million in a 55-year period in which millions also have fled the old monotony of farm life for the false glamor of the teeming cities.

But much of our crowdedness is unnecessary. It results from one thing: Everybody wants to do the same thing at the same time. They all want to work what used to be called bankers' hours—9 to 5; they all want to play on the same weekend days.

Whatever a man tried to do he finds himself hemmed in by the growing herd.

He goes to and from work standing up in a packed bus because everybody wants to work from Monday to Friday. He finds his night clubs and motion picture theaters jammed on Saturday nights, because that's the night everybody wants to kick up his heels.

On Sundays, unless it's raining, he worships in a thronged church or tries to putt on a golf green that looks like a political convention. Driving to the beach through maddened Sunday traffic he feels like a charioteer in "Ben Hur."

Whatever he does, from awaiting his turn at a luncheon counter to parking his car in a lover's lane, a man has to wait in line, has to fight for his place. He is elbowed, pushed, and shoved back. The result: General bickering, confusion, frustration; more headaches; and finally more ulcers, heart attacks and apoplexy.

The solution is as simple as it is inexplicable that it already hasn't been applied: Break up the ancient pattern by which men work at the same time, play at the same time.

This can be done by putting civilization on a seven-day week. Why shouldn't offices and factories be manned 16 hours a day, each eight-hour period utilizing half its present staff? This would reduce rush hour traffic, cut down on the parking problem, and make a general easier tempo in living.

With more people working on Saturday and Sunday, and more of them taking their days off in the middle of the week, the weekend pressure on pleasure resorts would automatically lessen. It shouldn't be too hard to adjust to: A church can be just as inspiring on Thursday as on Sunday. So can a golf course or a beach.

All it takes to give Americans a more leisurely, unhurried, uncrowded life (and cut down on the toll of the "civilization sickness") is to break with a few outmoded traditions.

How soon we will do it I don't know. But I do know one thing. The only sure way a man can keep a good digestion and a serene disposition today is to run away from home and become a hermit.

"Mary Haworth's Mail"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem is my friendly and popular daughter, now 25; and I've never been sure just what the problem is. But I am sure I have spoiled her in some way that may hurt her. Life just isn't as delightful as she seems to think.

She is attractive, congenial with all ages, competent (or better) in her job. She is happy, friendly, continually dating and getting dates for her unmarried girl friends.

During her college years she was informally engaged twice. Both boys were athletes. One was nice, but socially and financially about as different from us as possible. (We are in the upper income, club member bracket). The Navy parted them. The second boy had a criminal background, we learned, which horrified Edith—who says, however, that he was a really nice person, but sick!

Likes Gay Men
Since college there has been a steady stream of beaux. Those we favor she thinks dull (but nice). The ones she favors are big and slow thinking, or with years of schooling ahead, or the gay bachelor type. All are sports enthusiasts—fishing, skiing, tennis, etc. We sincerely try to like them all, but there are so few whose attraction for her we can understand.

Her father is very handsome—she is very proud of this. And I am considered attractive and vivacious. We have many friends of our own, and our house has been full of people (hers and ours) for years. I don't think I am the type to worry needlessly about something for years, but we are getting more and more upset about Edith. Too many dates, in too large groups, flitting hither and yon having "wonderful times," just seems immature to me.

She will forgive a girl friend any trick on her, and takes everyone at face value. She is so bright and lovable; perhaps some day she will meet the right man and marry. Motherlike, I think that would be wonderful. Have I made the problem clear? I do hope you will be able to help me understand it.

T. F.
DEAR T. F.: It appears that Edith's parents don't know their own child from the inside, so to speak—which suggests that they weren't adequately (or consistently) close to her, in sympathetic perceptive care, during her infancy and formative years. Too busy being popular, hospitable, successful, etc., as friends of their friends, I gather.

And it seems Edith has unconsciously patterned her life after her parents' "bright" example—as she saw it from a distance, through the child's eye (or imagination.) Never having been really close to parents, with a sense of being at the center of their heart-interest, she hasn't an ingrained aptitude for thou-and-me fellowship—which leads to cherished intimate "preferred" relationships on the adult plane.

Rather she lives on the surface of things, psychologically nonmeshed with others—an unconscious extension of a "social" relationship with parents that isn't rooted in deep reciprocal emotional involvement, so far as she feels or knows. She is everybody's friend; she doesn't even parry the thrusts of tricky female opportunists—and in this respect her unguardedness may be likened to tone-deafness.

Regrets Negligence
Never having felt the pitch of a good (mother-child) "we"-relationship—warmly loving, sympathetically loyal, dependably true-blue—she hardly knows when she's being ill used, either. She "sees" most "nice" people in terms of her parents, probably—that is, as well intentioned towards her, even when most disappointing.

You lament Edith's random pursuit of wonderful times, which "just seems immature to me," you say. But isn't her social circling as described a sort of carbon copy of her parents' performance when she was a child? Aren't you seeing your immaturity in a mirror, as it were? And regretting the effects upon her? Isn't this why you've worried about her for years, wondering if she'll ever win through to anchorage with the right man?

My advice is to discuss your concern with a psychiatrist or psychologist, to get at the roots of your misgivings. As you understand yourself in relation to Edith, and see your part in shaping her, you will be able to act more to the point in giving her a helping hand.

Major Leagues Chalk Records On Final Day

Cardinal Wally Moon Goes Into Hall Fame With His Home Run

The Associated Press

The 1955 major league baseball season started and ended on a record note.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, newly crowned National League champions, started it by reeling off 10 straight victories—a major league high for triumphs at the beginning of a campaign.

And when Wally Moon of the St. Louis Cardinals hammered a home run off Chet Nichols of Milwaukee in the ninth inning Sunday, two more records went into the books. It was No. 1,263 by National League batters and 2,224 by hitters of both leagues for new standards.

In between the accomplishment of the Dodgers and Moon's feat, which qualified his record-smashing bat for a place in baseball's Hall of Fame, there were enough other records and highlights to make 1955 one of the most interesting in years.

The Dodgers clinched their pennant on Sept. 8, the earliest date in history. And the New York Yankees pulled away in the final week after one of the closest battles in years.

Brooklyn wound up with a 13½-game advantage over the second-place Milwaukee Braves with the New York Giants, 1954 winners, another five games back. The Yanks beat the American League's defending titleholders, Cleveland Indians, by three games.

There was only one managerial change during the middle of the season. That was replacement of Eddie Stanky as pilot of the Cardinals by Harry Walker. But Leo Durocher stepped down Saturday after 7 years at the helm of the Giants and was replaced by Minneapolis' Bill Rigney and Fred Haney was fired yesterday as manager of the Pirates.

Without any attempt to evaluate the importance of the performances, here are some of the other highlights of the year:

PITCHING

Don Newcombe (20-5), Dodgers, and Robin Roberts (23-14), Phillies, were only 20-game winners in either league. Roberts won 20 or more games for sixth consecutive year.

Herb Score, Cleveland, broke Grover Alexander's 1911 rookie record by striking out 211, including 16 Red Sox (high for the year) in one game.

Sam Jones, Cubs, hurled only no-hitter of season. Pirates were the victims.

Vernon Law, Pirates, pitched the longest game of the year, 18 innings, but didn't receive credit for victory when Pittsburgh won out over Milwaukee in 19th.

BATTING

Ernie Banks, Cubs broke record for shortstops with 44 homers and his five grand slam homers also was a new major league mark.

Bobby Hofman, Giants—His nine pinch home runs tied Cy Williams' mark.

Willie Mays, Giants, and Duke Snider, Dodgers—Mays' 51 homers tied New York's record and Snider's 42 matched his own Brooklyn mark.

Al Kaline, Tigers, tied Ty Cobb as youngest player ever to win American League batting title. Kaline, 21, hit .340.

Newcombe's seven home runs broke a hitting record by a pitcher.

To look at the final day's games one would think, the pennant depended on every pitch.

Of the 10 games Sunday, there were three shutouts, two one-run performances the three two-run games.

The Dodgers, warming up their hurlers for the World Series opening Wednesday, used Johnny Podres, Russ Meyer, Clem Labine and Roger Craig in shutting out the Pirates 4-0.

Art Fowler of Cincinnati checked the Cubs with four hits while his mates slapped around three Chicago pitchers for a 13-0 decision. Billy Pierce of the White Sox limited the Athletics to three hits in a 5-0 triumph.

George Susce of the Red Sox defeated the Yankees 8-1 in the second game of a double-header after the American League champions had won the opener 9-2 with Bob Turley, Bob Grim and Johnny

Newcombe To Oppose Ford In Opener Of World Series

NEW YORK (AP)—Don Newcombe, a huge right-hander who won 20 games for Brooklyn, and Whitey Ford, the little 18-game-winning left-hander who helped clinch the American League pennant for New York last Friday, will be the opening game pitchers when the Dodgers and Yankees renew their World Series rivalry in Yankee Stadium Wednesday.

Odds-makers, who earlier had

Kucks sharing the mound duties.

The Giants beat the Phillies 5-2 with Mays hitting his 51st homer and then dropped a 3-1 decision as they were checked by Curt Simmons and Jack Meyer.

Bob Miller, who beat the Indians in an all-important game during the week, turned the trick again as the Tigers wound up with a 6-2 victory over Cleveland.

In other action the Cardinals beat the Milwaukee Braves 8-5 and the Baltimore Orioles edged Washington 5-4.

a practice session today at home. Tuesday the Yankees will work out at Ebbets Field and the Dodgers at Yankee Stadium.

The Yankees figure to have a psychological advantage over the Dodgers, whom they've whipped in all five previous World Series meetings. In fact, the Dodgers have lost all seven World Series in which they've participated while the Yankees have won 16 of 20.

Mantle, inactive since Sept. 16 when he pulled a leg muscle beating out a punt against Boston, finally got back into action yesterday as a pinch hitter in each game of the double-header against the Red Sox. Although trainer Gus Mauch and Stengel think he'll be ready for the series, Mickey isn't too hopeful.

"I haven't really tested the leg yet," he said, "and I won't test it until tomorrow but I think it's far from being healed. It doesn't hurt when I bat but I don't think I can run on it."

Hartwig And Hoag Winners Again

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Australia's Rex Hartwig and Lew Hoag again have beaten the United States Davis Cup standard bearers, Tony Trabert of Cincinnati and Vic Seixas of Philadelphia.

The bristling five-set doubles final featured the finals yesterday in the 29th annual Pacific Southwest Tennis Championships. The scores were 36, 63, 36, 64, 63.

Earlier in the day, Trabert, U.S. National and Wimbledon champion, trounced Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., in straight sets to win the men's singles title.

Haney Dropped As Pirate Pilot

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Fred Haney, fired as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, says he hopes to continue in baseball, isn't angry at Pirate General Manager Branch Rickey and has done the best he could to make a winning team out of the hapless Pirates.

Haney was in a genial mood to day as he prepared to leave for the World Series in New York and perhaps learn if he can hook on with another major league club. Philosophically accepting his dismissal by Rickey yesterday, Haney declared:

"I'm leaving Pittsburgh with a clear conscience. I tried to give 100 per cent to the club and if my best wasn't good enough, that's it, I guess. But I have no hard feelings against anyone."

installed the Yankees a slight favorite, now have changed it to a "pick-em affair" because of Mickey Mantle's pulled muscle, which threatens to sideline the star Yankee center fielder during the series.

Neither manager would go beyond his first-game hurler but it was expected that Manager Casey Stengel of the Yanks would name Tommy Byrne, another left-hander, to pitch the second game, also in the stadium. Then, the experts figured, he would come back with his right-handers, Bob Turley, Don Larsen and perhaps Bob Grim, for the three games at Ebbets Field.

Like most managers, Walter Alston of Brooklyn is reluctant to start a southpaw in Brooklyn, so it is likely he will call upon Johnny Podres, a left-hander, in the second game at the Stadium and save Billy Loes, Carl Erskine and perhaps Newcombe again for Ebbets Field.

Maryland Given Good Chance To Roll Along Undeclared

The Associated Press — Unless they run into unexpected complications, the big, bad Terrapins from the University of Maryland could well glide through to their third unbeaten, untied season in the past five years.

While it's true that Jim Tatum's split T outfit doesn't play as tough a schedule as some of the other top teams, it's equally true that the Terrapins can beat the best—namely UCLA.

Maryland won victory No. 2 Saturday with a 7-0 decision over the defending Pacific Coast Conference champions. It was their toughest opposition on this year's schedule.

This week, Maryland visits Baylor of the Southwest Conference. Then, on successive weeks, they play Wake Forest, North Carolina, Syracuse, South Carolina, Louisiana State, Clemson and Georgia.

Pro Football Bully Boys Taste Defeat

CHICAGO (AP)—The National Football League standings looked strange today with Cleveland and Detroit, the league's bully boys for three years, on the bottom looking up.

One game doesn't make a season, of course, even in the NFL, where they only play a dozen games a season. But both titans had long winning streaks over their opponents smashed as the Washington Redskins whipped Cleveland 27-17 and Green Bay nipped Detroit 20-17 on a pass from Tobin Rote to Gary Knefel with 20 seconds to go.

Opening day yesterday was a day of surprises all around as Baltimore, sparked by rookie Alan (The Horse) Ameche, spoiled the herald return to power of the Chicago Bears with a 23-17 victory and Los Angeles forced four big breaks to trim their arch-rivals, the San Francisco 49ers, 23-14.

Philadelphia, undefeated in six pre-season exhibitions, had to come from behind Saturday night to down the New York Giants 27-17.

The Chicago Cardinals and Pittsburgh Steelers open their seasons at Pittsburgh tonight.

This week's schedule:

Tonight: Chicago Cardinals at Pittsburgh

Saturday night: Detroit at Baltimore

Washington at Philadelphia

Sunday: Chicago Bears at Green Bay

Cleveland at San Francisco

New York at Chicago Cards

Pittsburgh at Los Angeles

High Gun Tipped For Famous Race

NEW YORK (AP)—The King Ranch's High Gun, sensational victor over Nashua, Jet Action and others in the $106,700 Synonby Stakes, was in line for an invitation today to the famous Washington, D. C., International Race at Laurel Park, Md.

Whether the strapping 4-year-old son of Helipolis-Rocket Gun accepts is another matter, for owner Robert J. Kleberg and Trainer Max Hirsch must put their heads together to decide what's next.

Sokolsky's These Days

The trouble with being a political leader of any country these days is that the climate of the moment is always set by Soviet Russia.

Therefore the opportunistic politician, who plays by ear, is never certain what the Russians will do to him, what trick they will suddenly pull out of their Pandora's Box. Nobody can tell whether suddenly, and for no apparent reason, they will spoil all his plays in the political game.

At present, for instance, the line is to say that Russia is not so bad after all, that Communists just belong to a political party like any other people, that nobody should be fanatical and narrowminded. Whoever does not follow that line is regarded as fanatical and mixed up, not to say, crazy.

But suppose it all goes just the opposite? For most people, that does not matter too much. Who remembers on Thursday what anyone said on Monday? But the words of the great are engraved on newsprint, and when the words prove to have been false, the result can be disastrous in an election. So they talk about Frank Costello!

Rigney Given OK By Leo Durocher

NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Rigney walks into his new job as manager of the New York Giants wearing the stamp of approval of one of the shrewdest minds in baseball, none other than the man he replaces, Leo Durocher who retired from baseball Saturday.

The slim Californian, whose physical appearance and gentle manly and charming manner off the field bely his blazing competitive spirit on it, is a man schooled in the Durocher tradition. He brings with him some of Durocher's mannerisms, an aggressive style and a talent for trigger-quick size-ups in the heat of action.

Rigney played six years under Durocher before he left the Giants to manage Minneapolis of the American Assn.

Maryland Given Good Chance To Roll Along Undeclared

The Associated Press — Unless they run into unexpected complications, the big, bad Terrapins from the University of Maryland could well glide through to their third unbeaten, untied season in the past five years.

While it's true that Jim Tatum's split T outfit doesn't play as tough a schedule as some of the other top teams, it's equally true that the Terps can beat the best—namely UCLA.

Maryland won victory No. 2 Saturday with a 7-0 decision over the defending Pacific Coast Conference champions. It was their toughest opposition on this year's schedule.

This week, Maryland visits Baylor of the Southwest Conference. Then, on successive weeks, they play Wake Forest, North Carolina, Syracuse, South Carolina, Louisiana State, Clemson and Georgia Washington.

Soil Conservation Field Day Program Set For Wednesday

Other Events Set To Follow Later In Year

Top Essay Contest Winners Eligible For State Honors

A special soil conservation field day program will be held next Wednesday at the Frank Bowling Farm in Jackson Township.

In case of rain, the program will be moved back one day to Thursday. Two sessions will be held; one at 9-11 a. m. and another at 1-3 p. m., with each meeting identical.

This is but one in a series of current events dealing with soil conservation. In an annual contest, essays are to be written Oct. 10-29 and then the two best from each school submitted to George McDowell, county superintendent of schools. Three county winners will be selected Nov. 15 and announced Dec. 1 at the annual meeting of the Pickaway County Soil Conservation District.

The top three prizes will be cups. The district winner will then be eligible for statewide competition, in which there are awards of $150, $100 and $50.

ACCORDING to the rules, the essay should be 800 words or less, either typed or neatly written in ink. The entrant's name will not appear on the essay; rather, the school name and a special number, to be assigned, will be placed on the essay.

Choice of subject is left open. But a suggestion is made that the material deal with the practical application of the essay subject to local soil, present and future.

Illustrations and principles based upon data from textbooks, bulletins, interviews and personal experience, may be used. These sources, however, must be identified.

The essay contest is open to all pupils in grades 9 to 12 enrolled in schools within the Pickaway County school district.

Curt Steele, area conservationist, and George Hamrick, associate extension agent for Pickaway County, are in charge of organization for the soil conservation field day program. Dick Swenson, county extension agent here, will present the orientation.

OTHER PORTIONS of the program will include: Soil Stop, by Bill Reese, soil

Hollywood Censors Defied; Dope Addict Movie Starts

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Should a movie be made depicting dope addiction?

The film industry's censors say no.

Producer Otto Preminger says yes. This week he's filming such a movie — "The Man With the Golden Arm," starring Frank Sinatra, Eleanor Parker and Kim Novak.

The film portrays Sinatra as a musician who has given up dope but is hooked back on the habit by a pusher. As is the custom, a copy of the script was sent to the production code office, headed by Geoffrey Shurlock.

"They sent it back marked 'unacceptable,'" Preminger reported. "They explained that because of the express wording of the code forbidding even the mention of narcotics, they could not pass our script."

The releasing company, United Artists, plans to appeal the decision to the board of directors of the Motion Picture Assn. But Preminger is not hopeful of the results.

"The board is made up of the presidents of the major companies," he remarked. "A fine court of appeal — our competitors!" The producer feels the code ukase against dope should be changed.

"I understand the provision was put in to discourage the use of narcotics," he said. "Obviously this approach has failed, because there is more use of narcotics in this country than ever."

"I feel my picture will not only not have a bad effect, but it will have a good effect, by dramatizing the evils of dope through the medium of entertainment."

"People do not go out and murder after seeing a murder in a movie. Those who murder would do so regardless of having seen it on the screen. People who have the psychological need for narcotics will not be dissuaded by a scientist; Tiling, by Virgil Overholt, extension engineer; Soil Saving Structure, by Guy Kerns, engineer (SCS); Waterway, by Dick Weber, assistant conservationist for the county; and Structure, by Don Archer, Pickaway County conservationist.

Improvements for the future will be explained as follows: Wild Life Area, by Bob Davis, extension wild life man; Pasture Improvement, by Gordon Rider, extension agronomist; and Woodland Improvement, by Byron Kent, state forester.

Mexican Drink Being Bottled

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Pulque, favorite alcoholic drink of Mexico's lower classes, is being bottled for the first time. This will give it new outlets in better grade bars, in restaurants, even in supermarkets.

Pulque comes from the maguey plant, something like the century plant found in the United States. Tequila and Mezcal are made from the roots. Pulque is the juice from its core. This liquid is fermented and later flavored — pineapple, orange, apple, any flavor desired. It packs a wallop stronger than beer.

later sentenced to Joliet State Penitentiary for armed robbery.
